One of the goals is to keep the content so concise that the book remains compact and easy to navigate while at the same time ensuring that the book is packed with as much information as possible, making it a valuable resource.

Computational Approaches for Aerospace Design Andy Keane, Prasanth Nair, 2005-08-05

Over the last fifty years the ability to carry out analysis as a precursor to decision making in engineering design has increased dramatically. In particular the advent of modern computing systems and the development of advanced numerical methods have made computational modelling a vital tool for producing optimized designs. This text explores how computer aided analysis has revolutionized aerospace engineering, providing a comprehensive coverage of the latest technologies underpinning advanced computational design. Worked case studies and over 500 references to the primary research literature allow the reader to gain a full understanding of the technology, giving a valuable insight into the world's most complex engineering systems.

Key Features

Includes background information on the history of aerospace design and established optimization, geometrical and mathematical modelling techniques, setting recent engineering developments in a relevant context.

Examines the latest methods such as evolutionary and response surface based optimization, adjoint and numerically differentiated sensitivity codes, uncertainty analysis and concurrent systems integration schemes using grid based computing.

Methods are illustrated with real world applications of structural statics, dynamics and fluid mechanics to satellite, aircraft and aero engine design problems.

Senior undergraduate and postgraduate engineering students taking courses in aerospace vehicle and engine design will find this a valuable resource. It will also be useful for practising engineers and researchers working on computational approaches to design.

Return Migration from Canada and the United States Catherine Letitia Woodman Colby, 1998

This study analyzes the impact of labor migration on a Mixtec speaking sending community in the Mixteca Alta of Oaxaca, Mexico. It considers migrant destinations, work experiences, skills and techniques learned abroad and possibly applied in the sending community, and remittances brought or sent home. This study seeks to provide an increased theoretical understanding of the concept of a migration stream and then demonstrate that each migration stream is made of distinct characteristics which correspond to specific changes and ramifications in the sending community The emphasis is on comparing international migration between Mexico and Canada through a guestworker program to migration to the United States with additional discussion of internal migration to Mexico City Specifically this project analyzes the impact of different types of migration on community political and religious structures on the lives of women on traditional artisan production on community agriculture and on perceptions of Mixtec culture and ethnicity The ultimate goal of this research is a better understanding of how migration types are related to community change and ultimately community and regional perspectives of development and improvement in the quality of life The analysis of the ramifications and potential benefits of migration on individuals and families dependent on migration in the Mixteca Alta has vital implications not only for future development in the Mixteca itself but also as a model for community development testing and application in similarly affected areas of Mexico and other countries This study also provides perspectives on the benefits and challenges of international contract labor insights significant for immigration and labor policy planners worldwide
