Designing for Democracy Jennifer Forestal, 2022 How should we fix digital technologies to support democracy instead of undermining it In Designing for Democracy Jennifer Forestal argues that accurately evaluating the democratic potential of digital spaces means studying how the built environment a primary component of our modern public square structures our activity shapes our attitudes and supports the kinds of relationships and behaviors democracy requires While many scholars and practitioners are attentive to the role of design in shaping behavior they have yet to fully engage with the question of what structures are required to support democratic communities and how to build them Forestal closes this gap by providing a new theory of democratic space Drawing from a wide range of disciplines including architecture psychology and the history of political thought she argues that democratic spaces must be designed with three environmental characteristics boundaries durability and flexibility that taken together afford users the ability to engage in fundamental civic practices Through extended analyses of Facebook Twitter and Reddit Forestal shows precisely how well these digital platforms meet the criteria for democratic spaces or whether they do so at all The result is a more nuanced analysis of the democratic communities that form or fail to emerge in these spaces as well as more concrete suggestions for how to improve them In connecting the built environment digital technologies and democratic theory Designing for Democracy provides blueprints for democracy in a digital age

Indexing 'Chav' on Social Media Emilia Di Martino, 2022-09-15 The book sets out to examine the concept of chav providing a review of its origins its characterological figures the process of enregisterment whereby it has come to be recognized in public discourse and the traits associated with it in traditional media representations The author then discusses the chav label in light of recent re appropriations in social network activity particularly through the video sharing app TikTok and subsequent commentary in the public sphere She traces the evolution of the term from its use during the first decade of the twenty first century to make sense of class status and cultural capital to its resurgence and the ways in which it is still associated with appearance in gendered and classed ways She then draws on recent developments in linguistic anthropology and embodied sociocultural linguistics to argue that social media users draw on communicative resources to perform identities that are both situated in specific contexts of discourse and dynamically changing challenging the idea that geo sociocultural varieties and mannerisms are the sole way of indexing membership of a community This volume contends that equating chav with underclass in the most recent uses of the concept on social networks may not be the whole story and the book will be of interest to sociocultural linguistics and identity researchers as well as readers in anthropology sociology British studies cultural studies identity studies digital humanities and sociolinguistics
