Viral Challenge Latest Sign In:

New-generation vaccines and novel vaccinal strategies against infectious diseases of livestock, wild and companion animals Denis Archambault, Raul Manzano Roman, Suresh Kumar Tikoo, Christophe Chevalier, Brad Pickering, 2023-08-25 Emerging and re-emerging infections in particular those caused by viruses are expected to rise in correlation among other factors with climate changes. Antibiotic resistance is another issue that will limit the therapeutic arsenal against bacterial and parasitic infections. Therefore, one must be adequately prepared to overcome and prevent current and novel infections, and vaccination remains the optimal way to fight infectious diseases in humans. This is also true for many impacting diseases of livestock and companion animals to which there are no available vaccines. First attenuated and inactivated and second subunit generation vaccines have their limitations. To overcome this, efforts have been made in recent years to develop novel vaccine types such as virus-like particle (VLP), viral vector, and DNA-based vaccines in humans and animals. The recent success in utilizing RNA technology-based vaccines to fight SARS-CoV-2 to limit the severity of clinical symptoms and mortality constitutes a promising way to develop such vaccines against animal diseases. Development of novel molecules or materials with adjuvant or immunostimulatory activity to adequately stimulate the innate immune response and therefore the pathogen-specific adaptive immune response, as well as the identification of suitable antigenic material that would bring broad protection against infectious agent variants, are other key issues to be considered in developing safe and innovative immunization strategies.

Replicating Vaccines Philip R. Dormitzer, Christian W. Mandl, Rino Rappuoli, 2010-11-02 Technological advances together with a better understanding of the molecular biology of infectious microorganisms are creating exciting possibilities for a new generation of replicating vaccines. Historically, live vaccines have been either directly derived from a natural source or attenuated by empirical approaches using serial passages and host cell adaptation. Currently, we are witnessing a quantum leap in our technological capabilities to specifically modify the genetic make-up of viruses and bacteria, making it possible to generate improved live vaccines and to develop completely new types of replicating vaccines such as vectored vaccines, single round infectious vaccines, and replicon vaccines. This book highlights some of the most exciting recent developments towards a new generation of replicating vaccines.

Hendriksen, Dorothea Sesardic, National Institute for Biological Standards and Control (Great Britain), Rijksinstituut voor Volksgezondheid en Milieuhygiëne (Netherlands), 1999 Interest in the use of alternative in vitro reduction and refinement methods in the development and control of biological products has increased considerably in the last few years. The issues raised are of concern to the scientific community as well as to manufacturers, regulatory authorities and those involved in animal ethics and welfare. A large number of physicochemical, immunochemical, biochemical and cell biological methods have been proposed for the replacement, reduction and refining of animal tests in the development and control of human and veterinary vaccines and other biological products. However, the implementation, validation and ultimate regulatory acceptance of these procedures are still at a very early stage. This volume contains the proceedings of a meeting which brought together research scientists, manufacturers and regulators with the aim of promoting an exchange of scientific knowledge and increasing awareness of the importance of validation studies.
