The Nantucket Pine Tip Moth C. Wayne Berisford, Donald Michael Grosman, 2000 Early Life Conditions and Rapid Demographic Changes in the Developing World Mary McEniry, 2013-11-04 This book examines the long term consequences of improvements in life expectancy in the mid 20th century which are partly responsible for the growth of the elderly population in the developing world Rapid demographic changes in child and infant mortality due to the reduction in and better treatment of disease were not often accompanied by parallel increases in standard of living Lower mortality led to greater survival by those who had suffered poor early life conditions As a consequence the early life of these survivors may explain older adult health and in particular the projected increase in adult health disease and diabetes Recent dietary changes may only compound such early life effects This study presents findings from historical and survey data on nearly 147 000 older adults in 20 low middle and high income countries which suggest that the survivors of poor early life conditions born during the 1930s 1960s are susceptible to disease later in life specifically diabetes and heart disease As the evidence that the aging process is shaped throughout the entire life course increases this book adds to the knowledge regarding early life events and older adult health Studies on the Shootborer , Health Promotion Throughout the Lifespan Carole Edelman, 1994

Ectomycorrhizal Fungal Communities in Seven North American Forests and Their Response to Nitrogen

Fertilization Jennifer Lyn Lansing,2003 Mycorrhizal fungi are found extensively in forest soils and play a crucial role in carbon and nitrogen cycling between plant and soil However little is known about how mycorrhizal communities differ between forest systems or what role they play in below ground carbon dynamics This study addresses the basic ecological questions of how ECM and AM vary between gymnosperm and angiosperm host taxa in undisturbed forest ecosystems which vary in climate and soil characteristics I use a manipulative N fertilization experiment to study the mycorrhizae between forest sites and their role in ecosystem cycling AM and ECM percent colonized root length and colonized root length per minirhizotron frame differed between sites and between years The extramatrical hyphae of all four major AM genera were present at all sites whereas spores in low abundance were mainly Glomus spp Richness of ECM morphotypes was similar between sites at a variety of scales Functional groups based on ECM morphological characters differed between sites and some fertilization effects were found Site location was the most influential factor in determining mycorrhizal abundance composition and overall role in carbon and nitrogen cycling At the P. edulis site I intensively studied the abundance diversity composition and spatial distribution of ECM using morphotyping and RFLP analysis Years differed in ECM abundance and composition ECM types differed in frequency across the landscape abundance at any individual tree and spatial aggregation Each P. edulis tree was similar in ECM tip abundance richness and number of dominant ECM types At all scales a few ECM types were dominant however there was temporal and tree to tree variability in which ECM were dominant The individual tree is the most important sampling unit when assessing P. edulis ECM diversity and composition Also at the P. edulis site using RFLP analysis to identify ECM types and ^{14}C to estimate age I found a differential response in the ^{14}C signature of RFLP types to N fertilization indicating that N fertilization does not affect all ECM fungi similarly and functional differences in ECM fungi exist Ecophysiology of root systems-environment interaction Boris Rewald,Omer Falik,Douglas

Godbold,Shimon Rachmilevitch,2014-09-03 There is a scarcity of detailed information regarding the ecophysiology of root systems and the way root system functioning is affected by both internal and external factors Furthermore global climate change is expected to increase the intensity of climate extremes such as severe drought heat waves and periods of heavy rainfall in addition other stresses such as salinization of soils are increasing world wide Recently an increasing awareness has developed that understanding plant traits will play a major role in breeding of future crop plants For example there is increasing evidence that the traits of root systems are defined by the properties of individual roots. However, further knowledge on the functional importance of root segments and the molecular physiological mechanisms underlying root system functioning and persistence is needed and would specifically allow modifying crop root system functionality and efficiency in the future. Another major gap in knowledge is localized at the root-soil interface and in regard to the potential adaptive plasticity of root rhizosphere interactions under abiotic stress and/or competition. It is currently unknown whether adaptations in microbe communities occur, for example, due to modified exudation rates and what are the subsequent influences on nutrient mobilization and uptake. Furthermore, uncovering the mechanisms by which roots perceive neighboring roots may not only contribute to our understanding of plant developmental strategies but also has important implications on the study of competitive interactions in natural communities and in optimizing plant performance and resource use in agricultural and silvicultural systems. In this Research Topic, we aimed to provide an online open access snapshot of the current state of the art of the field of root ecology and physiology with special focus on the translation of root structure to function and how root systems are influenced by interplay with internal and external factors such as abiotic stress, microbes, and plant-plant interaction. We welcomed original research papers but reviews of specific topics, articles formulating opinions or describing cutting edge methods were also gladly accepted.

Population Dynamics and Oviposition of the Northern Corn Rootworm, Diabrotica Barberi Steven Edward Naranjo, 1987 Census of India, 1971: 1977 : paper 1. Life tables. paper 2. Fertility tables, 1971 India. Office of the Registrar General, 1972
