Melting Pot Soldiers The Unions Ethnic Regiments:

Melting Pot Soldiers William L. Burton, 1998 Melting Pot Soldiers is the story of the way immigrants responded to the drama of the Civil War. When the war began in 1861 there were in most states in the North primarily from Western Europe large populations of immigrants whose leaders were active in American politics at the local state and national levels. Just as native born Americans both individually and collectively reacted to war so did these newcomers. A characteristic feature of the formation of the Union armies was the role played by politicians in the recruitment of the regiment, the basic unit of the army. Ethnic politicians and a few were women like their native born counterparts actively recruited young men into regiments in this case regiments based upon the country of origin of the recruits. There were dozens of such regiments mostly German and Irish but also a Scandinavian unit, a polygot outfit and there was an attempt to form a Scottish regiment. As the war progressed and casualties mounted these regiments gradually lost their ethnic composition. Ethnic entrepreneurs were the key figures in the organization of these regiments and such men ordinarily intended to parlay their military service into a post war political career. Burton examines the impact ethnic entrepreneurs had during the war both by their key role in the organization of their regiments and by their post war political careers.
