Good Meal Prep Ideas For Beginners and Dummies Barbara Dawson, 2020-08-18 Meal prepping is making a meal or recipe then portioning it out to grab and go meals for later. If you've ever kept your leftovers from dinner to take with you for lunch the next day then you've already mini meal prepped. Generally though meal prepping refers to making 3-7 days worth of food at a time. Think of it like keeping your lunches for the week all at once instead of keeping your lunch for the morning. You can use this same technique for breakfast, lunch, dinner, and snacks. Meal prepping involves no extra waste and reduces time to eat outside your home whether that's at a restaurant or a budget. When keeping your meal plan for the day, the first question is how long you'll want to eat homemade meals without having to do it every day. Meal prepping is not for everyone. It is good for the value of convenience and for more than just variety. With meal prepping you generally eat the same thing for a few days in a row so if you don't like leftovers or get bored with food meal prepping isn't for you. If having more variety is what you're maximizing your time and budget is more valuable to you then trying something different every day meal prepping is not for you. Generally, I've seen meal preppers either have one other person do a whole family meal or a whole family meal would be quite difficult but the more people the more it would be a challenge. A food item is stored in the refrigerator for a long time in a slow motion in the refrigerator. In addition to the way food is packed in the individual nuances of your refrigerator can impact the quality of your refrigerated meal. So the longer the food is in the refrigerator the less acceptable the texture and flavor will be to the eater. Always begin with the refrigerator guidelines to be the FDA and then follow your own preferences. In general, I don't like to keep food for more than a few days. I find that by the time food is in the refrigerator for a long time it's not good.
