SUSTAINABLE FASHION HOW TO TEXAS:

Sustainable Tourism Planning and Transportation in Texas, 1999 Because transportation and its related infrastructure are important components of tourism furnishing the primary means for the vast majority of travelers to get into out of and through a destination poor transportation planning and inadequate infrastructure can dramatically reduce the economic utility of tourism to a community This suggests a need to develop transportation planning frameworks to address tourism development within the broader context of community regional or statewide economic development goals It is the objective of this study to examine and better understand tourism related transportation flows and infrastructure development planning in selected regions of Texas and to examine and better understand the interrelationship between sustainable development transportation and tourism Three regions within Texas are examined as part of this study the Hill Country Fredricksburg the Gulf Port Arkansas and the Big Bend area Researchers chose to examine regions and sites separately based on the understanding that each destination displayed one or more distinct types of tourism that fell within the following matrix Data was collected initially through literature reviews and the Internet This information was combined with firsthand visual data and interview information to obtain a multi faceted picture of the extent to which transportation services and infrastructure hinder and or enhance the tourism experience and the extent to which tourism supports

The Strategic Repositioning of Arts, Culture and Heritage in the 21st Century George Mugovhani, Owen Seda, 2018-06-11 The post millennium world has been experiencing several recognisable historical milestones with regard to arts culture and heritage One of these has been the resuscitation and revival of creative elements of the arts culture and heritage of previously marginalised or disadvantaged communities around the world Until recently there had been scant regard and skewed allocation of resources for these but lately attempts have been made to promote and sustain them in order to enable the socio economic aspirations of a multicultural society The contributions brought together here are the product of papers that were presented during a conference on Strategic Repositioning of Arts Culture and Heritage in the 21st Century They cover a broad spectrum of subjects such as indigeneity music song and identity politics national reconciliation education product development and national development The Texas-Mexico Water Dispute and Its Resolution (?) Cyrus Reed,2007 Between 1992 and 2005 Chihuahua's Rio Conchos outflows were at less than 10 percent of their historical average prompting a highly public dispute with the US over water quantity under terms of the 1944 US Mexico Water Treaty Still Mexico made a number of water payments and achieved an eventual resolution of the dispute The resolution focused on a number of steps including investing over 140 million in irrigation district water conservation projects in the Rio Conchos which has historically provided two thirds of the Rio Grande's water below Fort Quitman Utilizing a case study approach rooted in political and cultural ecology the research examines the factors from drought to land use change purported by different interest groups as contributing to the transboundary Texas Mexico water dispute and finds at least three major narratives emerged in the period to explain the low flows including drought dam management and agricultural expansion and land use changes The dissertation shows however that the reduced outflows and reductions in dam water to farmers was just one factor in a changing agricultural context in which new land tenure rules decentralization of water management and the enactment of a more open economic framework precipitated resource use changes within the agricultural areas In addition the dissertation examines water and land resource use including conservation projects in three specific agricultural areas and finds significant transformations in markets policies and climate Farmers were not just passive victims of reduced water use the curtailment of government programs and privatization of land and water resources but adopted alternative water source strategies began to examine more conservationist minded agricultural practices and shifted cultivation to higher yield crops Still many farmers chose to abandon agriculture altogether as there was some consolidation of resources among wealthier farmers The transnationalization of the Rio Conchos which has resulted from the new focus on its water users may influence local decision making but the research contends that resource management decisions in the Rio Conchos Watershed are influenced and determined by local practices and environments as well as by economic and legal changes brought about by Mexico's inclusion into a globalized economy
