These authors have demonstrated that the use of the term "person" is not a neutral, descriptive term, but rather a term that carries with it a set of assumptions and values. They argue that the term "person" is used to describe individuals who are seen as having a certain level of autonomy and responsibility, and that this term is used to distinguish them from those who are seen as lacking these qualities. They argue that the term "person" is used to describe individuals who are seen as having a certain level of autonomy and responsibility, and that this term is used to distinguish them from those who are seen as lacking these qualities.

NOTE: The authors have no financial or other relationships that could be construed as a conflict of interest.
