1. Antennae—The antennae are composed of two segments, the scape and pedicel, and a flagellar club. The scape is the basal segment, and the pedicel is the second segment. The flagellar club is the third segment, and it is the part of the antenna that is used for smelling.

It is a well-known fact that the most effective way to prevent the spread of disease is to keep the environment clean and hygienic. This is particularly true for diseases that are transmitted through the air, such as influenza and COVID-19. By maintaining a clean and hygienic environment, we can reduce the risk of transmission and protect ourselves and others from getting sick.
