James, Leith Davis, 2025-08-31 This book is a multi disciplinary exploration of Jacobitism and its cultural legacy Chapters in the book examine the early history of the Jacobite movement analysing how adherents of the Stuart cause used new and existing networks of ideas people goods and activities to promote and circulate their ideas Engaging with media and nineteenth century literary networks the book considers the ways Jacobitism itself became an object of interest within a range of disciplines including antiquarianism song collection and literature Chapters on Jacobitism and networks of modern cultural memory reflect on twentieth century popular cultural representations of Jacobites They demonstrate innovative opportunities to engage with the subject matter of Jacobitism in the present day through transnational collaboration and digital humanities The book presents important new multi national and multi lingual perspectives on Jacobite Studies and the persistence of cultural engagement with the Jacobites Literacy in the Persianate World Brian Spooner, William L. Hanaway, 2012-03-19 Persian has been a written language since the sixth century B.C. Only Chinese, Greek and Latin have comparable histories of literacy Although Persian script changed first from cuneiform to a modified Aramaic then to Arabic from the ninth to the nineteenth centuries it served a broader geographical area than any language in world history It was the primary language of administration and belles lettres from the Balkans under the earlier Ottoman Empire to Central China under the Mongols and from the northern branches of the Silk Road in Central Asia to southern India under the Mughal Empire Its history is therefore crucial for understanding the function of writing in world history Each of the chapters of Literacy in the Persianate World opens a window onto a particular stage of this history starting from the reemergence of Persian in the Arabic script after the Arab Islamic conquest in the seventh century A.D. through the establishment of its administrative vocabulary its literary tradition its expansion as the language of trade in the thirteenth century and its adoption by the British imperial administration in India before being reduced to the modern role of national language in three countries Afghanistan, Iran and Tajikistan in the twentieth century Two concluding chapters compare the history of written Persian with the parallel histories of Chinese and Latin with special attention to the way its use was restricted and channeled by social practice. This is the first comparative study of the historical role of writing in three languages including two in non-Roman scripts over a period of two and a half millennia providing an opportunity for reassessment of the work on literacy in English that has accumulated over the past half century. The editors take full advantage of this opportunity in their introductory essay PMIRC volume 4 King of the Seven Climes, 2021-02-01. In a Middle Persian text known as Khusro and the Page one of the most famous kings of the ancient Iranian world Khusro I Anusherojan is called haft kiswar xawad y the King of the Seven Climes. This title harkens back to at least the Achaemenid period when it was in fact used and even further back to a Zoroastrian Avestan world view. From the earliest Iranian hymns those of the 6th s of Zarathushtra through the Younger Avesta and later Pahlavi writings it is known that the ancient Iranians divided the world into seven climes or regions. Indeed at some point there was even an aspiration that this world should be ruled by a single king. Consequently the title of the King of the Seven Climes used by Khusro I in the sixth century CE suggests the most ambitious imperial vision that one would find in the literary tradition of the ancient Iranian world. Taking this as a point of departure the present book aims to be a survey of the dynasties and rulers who thought of going beyond their own surroundings to forge larger polities within the Iranian realm. This volume was previously published by the Jordan Center for Persian Studies University of California Irvine

Refiguring Rhetorical Education Jessica Enoch, 2008-05-16. Refiguring Rhetorical Education: Women Teaching African American, Native American, and Chicano/a Students 1865-1911 examines the work of five female teachers who challenged gendered and cultural expectations to create teaching practices that met the civic and cultural needs of their students. The volume analyzes Lydia Maria Child's The Freedmen's Book a post-Civil War educational textbook for newly freed slaves. Zitkala'a's autobiographical essays published in the Atlantic Monthly in 1900 that questioned the work of off-reservation boarding schools for Native American students and Jovita Idar, Marta Peña, and Leonor Villegas de Magnán's contributions to the Spanish language newspaper La Crónica in 1910 and 1911 contributions that offered language and cultural instruction their readers could not receive in Texas public schools. Author Jessica Enoch explores the possibilities and limitations of rhetorical education by focusing on the challenges that Child, Zitkala'a, Idar, Peña, and Villegas made to dominant educational practices. Each of these teachers transformed their seemingly apolitical occupation into a site of resistance revising debilitating educational methods to advance culture-based and politicized teachings that empowered their students to rise above their subjugated positions. Refiguring Rhetorical Education considers how race, culture, power, and language are both implicit and explicit in discussions of rhetorical education for marginalized students and includes six major tenets to guide present-day pedagogies for civic engagement.
