Native American Art Peter Bolz,1999 Native American Art Masterpieces David W. Penney,1996 In addition to the historic pieces which make up the core of traditional Native American art are works from modern day masters the painters and sculptors of the twentieth century Trading Identities Ruth Bliss Phillips,1998 This book examines a range of art forms produced by Indians in northeastern North America for sale to travelers and tourists during the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries The Aboriginal peoples of the Woodlands were the first in North America to experience economic and social marginalization and in consequence the first to rely on the production of commodities for the tourist trade These hybrid art forms combine indigenous materials and techniques such as quillwork moosehair embroidery birchbark and basketry with Euro American genres and styles Tourist art of the period is generally of high quality and great aesthetic interest Yet scholars have largely ignored these objects because of their incorporation of Euro North American influences An innovative combination of fieldwork art historical analysis and historical contextualization this study for the first time rigorously compares a Native souvenir production to a wide range of Euro American decorative arts and home crafts It identifies the sources of object types and styles and reveals the innovative differences displayed by Aboriginal trade wares Images newly uncovered in archives and travel literature including depictions of Native vendors and makers illustrate the book along with never before displayed or published objects from museum collections in Europe and North America
