Native Sources Of Japanese Industrialization 1750-1920:

Native Sources of Japanese Industrialization, 1750-1920 Thomas Carlyle Smith, 1988 This collections of essays is one of a kind an outstanding exposition of a set of interpretations and body of information richly illuminating of a first class scholarly mind Conrad Totman Yale University Native Sources of Japanese Industrialization, 1750-1920 Thomas Carlyle

Smith, 2005 Native Sources of Japanese Industrialization, 1750-1920 Thomas C. Smith, 1988 Native Sources is a collection of seminal essays on the demographic economic and social history of Tokugawa and modern Japan by one of the most eminent historians of Japan in this country Gathered together for the first time and made accessible to students and scholars Professor Smith's essays are indispensable reading for anyone interested in Japan's remarkable history State Formation, Property Relations, & the Development of the Tokugawa Economy (1600-1868) Grace Kwon, 2015-12-22 Before the late 1960s Japan historians characterized the Early Modern Japanese economy in what are typical feudal terms Considered backward and stagnant it was argued that the economy eventually collapsed under the weight of its own internal limitations This narrative has given way in the past two decades to a new interpretation in which Japan's pre-industrial economy is portrayed as one of substantive growth and qualitative change the setting stage for modern development during the Meiji era

A Companion to Japanese History William M. Tsutsui, 2009-07-20 A Companion to Japanese History provides an authoritative overview of current debates and approaches within the study of Japan's history Composed of 30 chapters written by an international group of scholars Combines traditional perspectives with the most recent scholarly concerns Supplements a chronological survey with targeted thematic analyses Presents stimulating interventions into individual controversies

Japan in Print Mary Elizabeth Berry, 2006-02-16 A quiet revolution in knowledge separated the early modern period in Japan from all previous time After 1600 self-appointed investigators used the model of the land and cartographic surveys of the newly unified state to observe and order subjects such as agronomy medicine gastronomy commerce travel and entertainment They subsequently circulated their findings through a variety of commercially printed texts maps gazetteers family encyclopedias urban directories travel guides official personnel rosters and instruction manuals for everything from farming to lovemaking In this original and gracefully written book Mary Elizabeth Berry considers the social processes that drove the information explosion of the 1600s Inviting readers to examine the contours and meanings of this transformation Berry provides a fascinating account of the conversion of the public from an object of state surveillance into a subject of self-knowledge Japan in Print shows how as investigators collected and disseminated richly diverse data they came to presume in their audience a standard of cultural literacy that changed anonymous consumers into an us bound by common frames of reference This shared space of knowledge made society visible to itself and in the process subverted notions of status hierarchy Berry demonstrates that the new public texts projected a national collectivity characterized by universal access to markets mobility sociability and self-fashioning

Labour-Intensive Industrialization in Global History

Gareth Austin,Kaoru Sugihara,2013-09-13 The prevailing view of industrialization has focussed on technology capital entrepreneurship and the institutions that enabled them to be deployed Labour was often equated with other factors of production and assigned a relatively passive role Yet it was labour absorption and the improvement of the quality of labour over the course of several centuries that underscored the timing pace and quality of global industrialization While science and technology developed in the West and whereas the use of fossil fuels especially coal and oil were vital to this process the more recent history has been underpinned by the development of comparatively resource and energy saving technology without which the diffusion of industrialization would not have been possible The labour intensive resource saving path which emerged in East Asia under the influence of Western technology and institutions and is diffusing across the world suggests the most realistic route humans could take for a further diffusion of industrialization which might respond to the rising expectations of living standards without catastrophic environmental degradation
