academics and students The future of NATO and European defence Great Britain: Parliament: House of Commons: Defence Committee, 2008-03-20 This report is presented prior to the NATO Summit at Bucharest in April 2008 and examines the status of NATO in dealing with the security environment that exists in Europe today The situation in Afghanistan offers a key test of the strengths and failings of the NATO Alliance To bring stability and encourage development and reconstruction in this region requires a long term military and financial commitment on the part of the Alliance Failure in Afghanistan may diminish the effectiveness of NATO and undermine allied unity perhaps pushing the United States to question the purpose of NATO itself The Bucharest Summit will have to address a number of issues in respect of Afghanistan including the need to generate sufficient military forces to carry out operations NATO faces broader questions about its role and relevance in the 21st century and the Defence Committee believes it needs to launch a far reaching review of its strategic concept setting forth a future role and purpose NATO's willingness to fulfil a global role is critical to the continued support of the United States NATO has shortfalls across a range of specific military capabilities which are seen as compromising its ability to mount and sustain the expeditionary operations that underpin the Alliance The creation of the NATO Response Force is seen as representing a significant achievement but it needs to be financed out of NATO Common Funding The Committee states that NATO's biggest shortfall is a lack of political will where a large and growing gap exists between the United States and the European members in defence spending The Committee further states that the relationship between NATO and the EU is plagued by mistrust and characterised by unhealthy competition Improving communication and coordination between the two is seen as essential The Committee views NATO as indispensable to the Alliance The Future of European Security

Beverly Crawford,1992 Future of NATO Charles-Philippe David,Jacques Lévesque,1999-05-20 The Future of NATO looks at the conceptual and theoretical approaches that underlie the question of enlarging NATO's membership and the consequences of enlargement on international relations It examines the policies of some of NATO's leading member states including Canada which has recently begun a two year term on the security council and deals with the issue of enlargement from the point of view of the East European candidates focusing on Russia and its opposition to the current process

Congress. Senate. Committee on Foreign Relations. Subcommittee on European Affairs,1995 NATO's Future Role in Europe Richard L. Kugler,1990 This report develops a conceptual framework for thinking about future NATO policies It analyzes individually and interactively the major variables that seem likely to shape NATO's role over the period 1990-2005 NATO's premature dissolution could unleash forces of instability in Europe The Alliance serves vital Western interests that transcend the specific details of East-West relations As long as it continues to face a Soviet military threat of some sort it will need a coherent military strategy and defense posture What is needed is a process of change and adaptation one aimed at transforming NATO from its primarily military orientation into a more political alliance calling for a policy of pragmatic aims rather than ultimate visions One evolutionary path Europe might follow is discussed The goals of Western security policy would be to use NATO to enhance stability at each stage guard against reversals and encourage further evolution Co-operative System of European Security Heiko Bubholz,2002-08-19 Seminar paper from the year 2002 in the subject Politics Topic International Organisations grade 1 0 A Jagiellonian University in Krakow Centre for European Studies course European Security at the turn to the 21st century language English abstract The process of European integration makes significant and visibly progress Only few months ago a considerable number of European citizen decided enthusiastically to adapt the new currency while the procedure and negotiation towards the eastward enlargement of the Community produces predominantly positive news At latest with the Council Meeting of Laeken it had been concluded that a major step of the enlargement and thus an unprecedented step in Europe s history might be accomplished in 2004 1 Nonetheless the events of two recent wars on the Balkans Bosnia and Kosovo and the consciousness of Europe s inability to cope with these local conflicts prevails still in the collective memory of most of European political and military leaders After the end of the Cold War the today s security scenario is lacking the to certain extent healthy superpower polarity of the good old days that often served to impose tense order in a confrontational world Intra failed state and regional conflicts are now joining with local instability and insurgencies which may define the most likely forms of upcoming armed conflicts in Europe or its near periphery 2 Thus aim of this paper shall be to elaborate a feasible and predictable scenario of European future security policy and its accompanying means To the purpose of this discussion it deems necessary first to identify where Europe is or where it ends and what should be considered indispensable for a European security model Correspondingly there are already a number of international organizations in existence which solely may already provide sufficient security to what is considered of Europe s interest Part of this paper shall be the evaluation if these existing institutions This should allow for some recommendations which ought to be the last part of this discussion

Victor Papacosma, Pierre-Henri Laurent, 1999 Evolution of NATO and Development of a New European Security System Giuseppe Pilosio, 1998 Since the fall of the Berlin Wall the security architecture in Europe has substantially changed For many the end of the Cold War reflected a possible end of NATO s existence The prediction of NATO's inevitable demise has so far been wrong. NATO is still in good shape but the NATO of yesterday does not exist anymore. The Alliance has been downsized, reorganized, redeployed and regenerated under a different concept. To summarize, the organization has undertaken a double process of adaptation internally and externally. Internally, NATO military forces have reduced their size and readiness, improved their mobility, flexibility and adaptability to different contingencies, and relied on a greater use of multinational formations. In addition, an agreement on a new command structure that foretells a reduction from 65 headquarters at present to 20 has been reached. Externally, NATO has opened itself to the East by creating, at first, the North Atlantic Cooperation Council and, in 1994, the Partnership for Peace program. In addition, the Alliance has remained open to membership of other European countries. To date, twelve nations have asked to join NATO and three have already signed the Protocols of Accession. In the meantime, the European Union Member States reactivated the Western European Union (WEU) in an effort to establish a European Security and Defense Identity. In 1996, the WEU was given permission to conduct its own military missions using NATO assets through the concept known as Combined Joint Task Force. These decisions have created the conditions for a valid European defense system. Now, the question is to identify a more suitable equilibrium between the two pillars of the Atlantic Alliance: American and European Equilibrium that is essential for the future of European and US relations. The Future of European Security: An Interim Assessment, 2010-12. The post cold war security landscape is changing almost daily. Gone is the monolithic threat from a communist bloc led by the Soviet Union. In its place are scores of new concerns: the challenge of system transformation and political and economic reconstruction in central and eastern Europe; the re-emerging threats of ethnic conflict from the former Yugoslavia to the new central Asian republics; and perhaps most important, the problems associated with the reconstruction of the Russian superpower, including economic and political instability, the threat from the right, the safety of nuclear stockpiles and the nation's legitimate security interests as it attempts to regain influence. As these threats change, so must existing European security institutions. In this book, Catherine Kelleher examines emerging trends in post cold war European security. She provides an overview of existing security structures and relationships and of the dynamics of changes within them. She offers insightful analysis into the strengths and weaknesses of these structures as well as the challenges to closer cooperation. Kelleher details recent events in Europe's most important security institutions: NATO, the Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe (CSCE) and the Western European Union (WEU), with special emphasis on new programs being designed to fit the changing landscape: programs like the Partnership for Peace, the Eurocorps and the Combined Joint Task Forces. She examines how they have responded to events in central and eastern Europe, from economic and security outreach efforts toward the emerging democracies to the response of these institutions to the Gulf and Yugoslav crises. Kelleher concludes with policy prescriptions that will make a significant contribution to the ongoing debate about the future of European security, where it is going and the best way to get there and America's central role in that future. NATO is poised to play a major role in events which will determine whether the 21st century is plagued with the outbreak of wars typical of the 20th century. This book delineates the key issues facing NATO at the dawn of the century: expansion, modernization, NATO organizations, economic capacity of the member countries, command structure and the Bosnia situation.
