modern society we have professionalized our care for the dying and deceased in hospitals and hospices churches and funeral homes cemeteries and mausoleums to aid dazed and disoriented mourners But these formal institutions can be alienating and cold leaving people craving a more humane mourning and burial process The burial treatment itself has come to be seen as wasteful and harmful marked by chemicals plush caskets and manicured greens Today s bereaved are therefore increasingly turning away from the old ways of death and searching for a more personalized environmentally responsible and ethical means of grief Is the Cemetery Dead gets to the heart of the tragedy of death chronicling how Americans are inventing new or adapting old traditions burial places and memorials In illustrative prose David Charles Sloane shows how people are taking control of their grief by bringing their relatives home to die interring them in natural burial grounds mourning them online or memorializing them streetside with a shrine ghost bike or RIP mural Today s mourners are increasingly breaking free of conventions to better embrace the person they want to remember As Sloane shows these changes threaten the future of the cemetery causing cemeteries to seek to become more responsive institutions A trained historian Sloane is also descended from multiple generations of cemetery managers and he grew up in Syracuse s Oakwood Cemetery Enriched by these experiences as well as his personal struggles with overwhelming grief Sloane presents a remarkable and accessible tour of our new American way of death

'Giving Something

Back' Hannah Jane Rumble,2010 This thesis engages with the recent innovation in British funerary rites known as natural burial through an interview based case study of one particular site Barton Glebe which offers woodland burial Through ethnographic description and socio cultural analysis the values concepts and behaviours aligned with natural burial are approached from the perspective of the bereaved pre registered users site providers and those in the funeral industry The thesis begins by providing an overview of natural burial in Britain Chapter 1 in which historical and cultural continuities between contemporary British natural burial provision and prior disposal practices are compared Chapter 3 Chapter 4 provides a historical account of Barton Glebe s first ten years of burial provision Chapter 5 shows how Barton Glebe is not only a physical landscape but also an emotional landscape in which emotions and memory are socio spatially articulated through nature Chapter 6 identifies the range of values invested in Barton Glebe and argues that the policing of graves and enforcement of rules and regulations by ground staff are reactions to a conflict of values most often between site management and the bereaved Whilst not unique to natural burial this conflict is particularly striking in a burial ground in which little or no memorialisation should take place Subsequently Chapter 7 argues that the dead are not necessarily given sovereign status a feature that distinguishes Barton Glebe from other places of burial It is the natural world that becomes a feature at Barton Glebe and I argue can create a therapeutic landscape for the bereaved Chapter 8 concludes by arguing that the motives to give something back and to return to nature allow those who pre register to affirm their core values and imagine continuity of identity beyond death by becoming a part of nature whilst the desire to be of use grants personal salvation for some pre registered users      Modern Cemetery ,1897      The builder ,1873      Modern Cemetery ,1931
