

NATIVE AMERICAN TRIBES

READING COMPREHENSION AND QUESTIONS

The Plains Indians were Native Americans who lived in the Great Plains, a large area of flat land with tall grass and few trees. They hunted buffalo which gave them food, clothing, and materials to build their houses, tools, and toys. They were nomads, which means they moved from place to place and buffalo herds and could be found everywhere. Plains Indians were hunters and used horses to help them hunt and travel. They had several relationships with horses, using them to travel, to hunt, and to carry things. Plains Indians did celebrate their culture and their traditions.

The Wampanoag were a Native American tribe that lived in what is now Massachusetts and Rhode Island. They lived near the ocean, rivers, and forests. The Wampanoag were hunters, farmers, and gatherers. They used the land, water, and forests to get food and materials. They lived in small villages and used canoes to travel. The Wampanoag were known for helping the Pilgrims when they came to America in 1620. A Wampanoag man named Squanto showed the Pilgrims how to plant crops and catch fish. The Wampanoag and Pilgrims shared a meal together. That meal is remembered as the first Thanksgiving. Today, the Wampanoag people still live in their homeland and keep their traditions alive.

The Hopi Indians were a Native American tribe that lived in what is now Arizona. They lived in the desert, near the Colorado River. The Hopi were farmers and gatherers. They used the land, water, and forests to get food and materials. They lived in small villages and used canoes to travel. The Hopi were known for their pottery and weaving. They had a strong sense of community and shared their traditions with each other. Today, the Hopi people still live in their homeland and keep their traditions alive.
