Practical Text Mining and Statistical Analysis for Non-structured Text Data Applications Gary Miner, 2012-01-11. The world contains an unimaginably vast amount of digital information which is getting ever vaster ever more rapidly. This makes it possible to do many things that previously could not be done: spot business trends, prevent diseases, combat crime, and so on. Managed well, the textual data can be used to unlock new sources of economic value, provide fresh insights into science, and hold governments to account. As the Internet expands and our natural capacity to process the unstructured text that it contains diminishes, the value of text mining for information retrieval and search will increase dramatically. This comprehensive professional reference brings together all the information tools and methods a professional will need to efficiently use text mining applications and statistical analysis. The Handbook of Practical Text Mining and Statistical Analysis for Non-structured Text Data Applications presents a comprehensive how-to reference that shows the user how to conduct text mining and statistically analyze results. In addition to providing an in-depth examination of core text mining and link detection tools, methods, and operations, the book examines advanced preprocessing techniques knowledge representation considerations and visualization approaches Finally the book explores current real world mission critical applications of text mining and link detection using real world example tutorials in such varied fields as corporate finance business intelligence genomics research and counterterrorism activities

The Internet has become a social Web. Users with the same interests find each other and discuss everything they think about for examples about products. Instead of asking friends about their product experiences they use online communication platforms for the search and the exchange of information. In doing so a large variety of opinions for every kind of product can be found in the blogs and forums. Analyzing the electronic word of mouth communication is the direct way to customer opinions. Twittering the #ArabSpring? Johannes Sieben, 2012-12-12 Master's Thesis from the year 2012 in the subject Communications

Multimedia Internet New Technologies grade 72% Distinction City University London School of Informatics and School of Arts and Social Sciences course MSc Information Communication and Society language English abstract This dissertation examines tweet content from key periods of the uprisings in Egypt and Syria of 2011 and 2012 generally known as the Arab Spring. Some authors and the main stream media have suggested that these uprisings were significantly influenced and organised by Twitter and subsequently referred to them as Twitter Revolution. Other authors have strongly opposed this idea and attributed it to self deception in the light of marvellous inventions of the Western World. They have suggested Twitter was predominantly used as an information sharing network. In an effort to contribute data to this debate this dissertation analyses tweet content from three different observation periods two tweet datasets were collected from other academics and third one was crawled from the Twitter API this process made use of the crawling tool cURL and the database software mongoDB. The combined tweet dataset contained about 1.9 million tweets out of which a sample of 1945 tweets was drawn. This sample was then evaluated in a quantitative content analysis according to a coding manual. These codes were entered into the statistical analysis software SPSS in which they were also processed. This study found that in the context of these uprisings Twitter was indeed used more as an information sharing tool and only to a relatively small fraction for organisational purposes. This result does not negate the possibility of a mobilising effect of that small fraction. A further central result is that almost every second tweet contained a hyperlink and that most of these lead to visual stimuli.
