The purpose of the present research was to test the proposed model designed to increase reliability. First, questions of reliability, validity, generalizability, and fit were addressed using three data sets that had been previously collected and analyzed. Issues regarding the test-retest reliability of the instrument, the construct validity of the instrument, and the extent to which it is capable of detecting real differences within and among groups were addressed. The company itself has a credit rating (and deal with banks, mortgage and insurances) that are perfect examples for political control. Without mortgage insurance for a house owned by someone (which will take some 10% of the house price), mortgage lenders will not give the loan. Otherwise, Spanish banks would have been in a very bad state even before the financial crisis (which is not a surprise).
