

Intermittent Fasting

Stage 1: Right After Eating

- Carbohydrates from food are converted into glucose (sugar) and released into the bloodstream.
- Blood sugar level rises.
- Insulin stimulates the conversion of glucose into glycogen as energy storage.

Stage 2: 3 Hours After Eating

- While insulin works, blood sugar level drops.
- In a non-fasting state, glycogen is used as energy.
- Excess glycogen that is not used is stored in the body as fats.

Stage 3: 9 Hours After Eating

- As blood sugar levels continue to drop, the body reacts by converting glycogen back into glucose and releasing it into the bloodstream.
- Fat is not yet used as an energy source, as there is still glucose and glycogen available.

Stage 4: 11 Hours After Eating

- Now that the stored glycogen has been almost used up, a metabolic switch is flipped.
- Fat is burned as it is used as energy.

Stage 5: 14-16 Hours After Eating

- As fat-burning continues, fatty acids are converted into ketones via ketosis.
- Ketones provide energy to the brain, heart and other vital organs.

Intermittent fasting in chickens Caroline Lindholm, 2019-10-16 Broiler breeder chickens are the parent stock used to produce broiler chickens raised for human consumption and have long been caught in a welfare dilemma. The immensely successful selection of fast growing meat type chickens over the last 80 years has created a remarkably efficient meat producer and given us access to cheap chicken meat but has also created health problems for the animals. These problems especially affect the breeder generation which must be raised with strict feed restriction to limit weight gain and thus maintain physical health and normal fertility. At the same time however feed restriction causes chronic hunger and feeding frustration with reduced animal welfare as a result. In the EU alone 60 million breeders are affected annually and although the problem is well known within the industry there is financial incentive to keep selecting for even higher growth potential in broilers further increasing the problems for broiler breeders. Many strategies for reducing the impact of growth restriction on breeder welfare have been suggested and are usually aimed at somehow increasing the amount of feed given at feeding times. This can be done either through adding bulky fibers to the diet or by reducing feeding frequency. In this thesis focus is on the latter as we explore the effects of intermittent fasting (IF) on the welfare of young broiler breeders as well as wild type Red Junglefowl. Intermittent fasting or skip a day feeding is supposedly the most common feeding strategy for broiler breeders worldwide but is perceived as welfare reducing and thus illegal in Sweden and several other European countries. In spite of this the scientific knowledge of how this type of feeding affects chicken welfare is scarce. Assessing the overall effect of IF on breeder welfare is complicated by large variations in both physiological and behavioral parameters between feeding and fasting days but it does appear that chicken welfare is improved at least on the feeding days of IF regimens. It also seems that some of the health benefits reported from mammalian studies of IF may apply to chickens as well although behavioral indicators still point to welfare issues unless the level of feed restriction can be relaxed. In comparison with daily feed restriction IF appears to increase the motivation for feed consumption but to reduce the motivation for appetitive behaviors such as foraging which may explain why birds fed on this type of schedule are often reported as calmer.
