The Shadow of the Obelisk and Other Poems (Classic Reprint) Thomas William Parsons, 2015-07-09 Excerpt from The Shadow of the Obelisk and Other Poems the Shadow of the Obelisk combien d hommes ont regarde cette ombre en Egypte et a Rome Chateaubriand Homeward turning from the music which had wildered so my brain That my way I scarce remembered to the Quirinal again Not unwilling to forget it underneath a moon so fair In a solitude so sacred and so summer like an air By the shore I came of Tiber little conscious where I stood Till I marked the yellow trembling of the light upon the flood Tethered near some broken barges hid the wave s august repose Petty sheds of humble dealers nigh the Campus Martius rose Hardly could the dingy Thamias when his tide is ebbing low Life s dull scene in colder colours to the homesick

Oran and Other Poems Is quite extinguished and the heart sealed up For evermore unloving and unloved What will these anxious hours of care avail tis all in vain then better end at once These harrowing agonies of baffled hopes Night after night pent up within this room These books my sole companions and the thought My barque is launched upon the ood of Death Shrouds my soul as fear the murderer shrouds When his own whispers scare him in the night Happy are those whom Fortune gently leads Through life s serenest scenes and fills their cup With the luxurious juice of I leasure s vme But ah Too many from their infant years Are nursed in poverty and suck the breasts Of Disappointment and accursed Neglect Poor scions of a noble family My heart yearns for you and I fain would bind Your lacerated bosoms with the balm Of heaven born soul

Excerpt from Osbulbaha and Other Poems Three hundred years ago and fifty more Along this lake s fair brow one morn of May Nature her freshest brightest aspect wore The birds were singing each a sweeter lay Each tree and vine had something blithe to say The bays were in the fullest of full bloom And Opening ower with open strove for room The sky was bluer purer the mild air Than they have been since we who hold the land By right of cunning and complexions fair Drew feverish breath herein and think it grand To hew and burn and let no beauty stand The lake slept with the sky deep in its breast Like maid with vision of her lover blest When by this lake beneath the bays in bloom An Indian princess beautiful as night About the

Excerpt from Hudibras But these are so few that it is much to be lamented that the poet has not yet met with an Addison a Prior a Pope or a Swift to do him justice in this respect The historical and explanatory notes are intended to clear up the historical parts of the poem which have in a great measure been passed over in the former annotations And the reader it is hoped will better apprehend and relish the satire couched in this poem when he is acquainted with the persons and transactions at which it is levelled About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books Find more at www.forgottenbooks.com
