THINK IT THROUGH

PASTORAL RESOURCE TEAM

Read the following passage from the book How to Be a Pastor by David A. Young. Then answer the questions that follow.

One of the most common questions I hear from pastors is, "How do I know if I'm called to be a pastor?" The answer is simple: you know if you're called to be a pastor when you feel a deep sense of responsibility for the spiritual well-being of the people in your congregation. This responsibility is not just a job; it's a calling. It's a sense of purpose that drives you to seek out the needs of your people and to provide them with the guidance and support they need to grow in their faith.

But how do you develop this sense of responsibility? The answer lies in the relationship between you and your people. You must be willing to listen to their concerns, to understand their struggles, and to offer them the love and grace that only God can provide. This is not an easy task, but it is one that is essential to the life of a pastor. It is in this relationship that you will find the strength and the joy that come from knowing that you are making a difference in the lives of others.

So, if you are called to be a pastor, you must be willing to embrace this responsibility. You must be willing to listen, to understand, and to love. You must be willing to serve. And you must be willing to trust in God's plan for your life and the lives of your people. For it is in this trust that you will find the true meaning of the pastoral calling.
