

Lab - Design and Build a Small Network (Instructor Version)

Instructor Note: Red font color or gray highlights indicate text that appears in the instructor copy only.

Objectives

Explain how a small network of directly connected segments is created, configured, and verified.

Background /Scenario

Note: This activity is best completed individually.

Design and build a network from scratch.

- Your design must include a minimum of one Cisco 4321 router, two Cisco 2960 switches, and two PCs.
- Fully configure the network and use IPv4 or IPv6 (subnetting must be included as a part of your addressing scheme).
- Verify the network using at least five show commands.
- Secure the network using SSH, secure passwords and console passwords (minimum).

Create a rubric to use for informal peer grading. Present your Capstone Project to the class and be able to answer questions from your peers and instructor!

Instructor Note: This optional Modeling Activity is suggested to be a graded assignment after completing all the chapters. Students should be able to show how small networks are designed, configured, verified, and secured. Documentation is a large factor of this project and students must be able to explain their network design and verification using show commands.

Required Resources

- Real Equipment
- Student/group-created rubric for assessment of the assignment

Reflection Questions

1. What was the most difficult portion of this activity?

Answers will vary.

2. Why do you think network documentation is so important to this activity and in the real world?

Documentation is imperative to good network management and without it, network administrators have to recreate topologies, physically check addressing, etc. This takes time, which could be used elsewhere.

A suggested rubric and documentation examples are provided below:

Note: This rubric includes a total of 100 points for the points earned category (if minimum standards are met). Instructors may wish to consider adding bonus points for additional/advanced work in any requirement category.
