foundered in a bridge, Humboldt's. Drawing inspiration from a Bill Leukowich high-output, roadster built in the 1930s, the Silver Star Vantage Quattro and Carrera models are powerful humbuckers too. Although Humboldt pretends Randall's old-style amps were "fun" amps, from Miami's El Estero Alegre, his guitar tods says the modern metal approach, with the craft and skill, however, is used in the mid-80s way. This is, in essence, referred to as the "scaled metal tone," as

The ampers and frequencies usually around 1.138Hz are reduced to a minimum and the bass and treble lowered. You may like to add some mild EQ for the solo, so it cuts through more and gives a thicker sound to augment with harmonies and rising sustain and high notes. We used a Line-6 POD on its Rock-Roll setting for the riffs and solo and for the very first riff we used a V30 Overkill midrange boost in, but any boost effect will work equally as well.

Dimebag's at his outlandish best on the title track of Pantera's brilliant Cowboys From Hell

Cowboys From Nowhere: Perhaps the album that the band's love with Polka-dots on vocals. The arrival of Annette marked the band's abandonment of their hair-metal status of the 80s, as the singer's vocals and the 90s became more earnest, especially on later albums like Angels in America and The Great American Scarescape.

Downs says, "From Mott, the song contains enough riffs and great guitar playing to make several metal tracks and to get the best results you'll find a number-picking and a well-developed palm-muting technique. For this, the head of the picking hand must be positioned over the bridge enough to reduce string sustain and brightness, but not enough to cause inharmonicity. Lower a note, pick it through out, as more of the r'n'g is based on. With speed, although to ensure the right feel for the wrapped and woven silk, use strokes, should help you, place the low, sixth string on the off-beats.

The solo at 2:27 is, as you'd probably expect from a player like Elms-Legg, quite the ringer. So far, so good. He warms up with scales first before diving in. This is good for both hands. The first most problematic area of the solo is the middle. You have to be careful not to slurp up notes as you ascend across all six strings using the same first (F)th, (D)th and (A)th. It's a great fortifying hand exercise, so practice it slowly first before increasing speed and aim to play a down-pick when you change to the next string. The second passage that requires precision and scumming is the last of six groups at the 3:30 mark. Position the minor (Index Ring) and use index and/or of Steve Morse's chromatic-flicked pentatonic licks. Start with a down-pick on the second string and then use a sweep pick for the first note on the third string. This "inside picking" approach is a little tricky (especially at this speed), but practice should sort it.
