Pakistan , 2019 The Rise and Decline of the Insurgency in Pakistan's

FATA Shahzad Akhtar, 2022-12-16 This book analyzes the emergence rise and decline of insurgency by the Pakistani Taliban in Pakistan's North Western region also known as Federally Administered Tribal Areas FATA It provides a detailed account of the rise and decline of the FATA insurgency and also examines aftereffects of the insurgency Offering an in depth analysis of how insurgency in the FATA began in 2004 after Pakistan entered its military forces into the tribal areas the author illustrates that the insurgency erupted when state repression on masses is combined with a disruption of the previous modus vivendi centered on co optation of local elites In the following years the insurgency became so powerful that most of the FATA region fell under the control of the insurgents The book further argues that a weak counterinsurgency strategy by the Pakistani government characterised by the overzealous use of force and a failure to win the support of local communities led the insurgency to become stronger and expand its control Furthermore the analysis reveals that a more robust counterinsurgency strategy relying more on a determined and a judicious use of force and attempts to gain the trust and support of local communities adopted in the later years led to the collapse of the insurgency In short this book offers an explanation of what makes an insurgency more likely to occur and how insurgency escalates and declines In addition this book sheds light on recent development in FATA including the merger of FATA with the mainstream Pakistan the rise of the Pashtun Tahafuz Movement a non violent protest movement and the resurgence of the Pakistani Taliban especially after the Afghan Taliban capture of Kabul in the wake of US withdrawal of forces in Afghanistan This book is a timely addition to the

written for RSIS by scholars academics and associates of the S Rajaratnam School of International Studies RSIS Nanyang Technological University Instant City Steve Inskeep,2011-10-13 From the host of NPR's Morning Edition a deeply reported portrait of Karachi Pakistan a city that illuminates the perils and possibilities of rapidly growing metropolises all around the world In recent decades the world has seen an unprecedented shift of people from the countryside into cities As Steve Inskeep so aptly puts it we are now living in the age of the instant city when new megacities can emerge practically overnight creating a host of unique pressures surrounding land use energy housing and the environment In his first book the co host of Morning Edition explores how this epic migration has transformed one of the world's most intriguing instant cities Karachi Pakistan Karachi has exploded from a colonial port town of 350 000 in 1941 to a sprawling metropolis of at least 13 million today As the booming commercial center of Pakistan Karachi is perhaps the largest city whose stability is a vital security concern of the United States and yet it is a place that Americans have frequently misunderstood As Inskeep underscores one of the great ironies of Karachi's history is that the decision to divide Pakistan and India along religious lines in 1947 only unleashed deeper divisions within the city over religious sect ethnic group and political party In Instant City Inskeep investigates the 2009 bombing of a Shia religious procession that killed dozens of people and led to further acts of terrorism including widespread arson at a popular market As he discovers the bombing is in many ways a microcosm of the numerous conflicts that divide Karachi because people wondered if the perpetrators were motivated by religious fervor political revenge or simply a desire to make way for new real estate in the heart of the city Despite the violence that frequently consumes Karachi Inskeep finds remarkable signs of the city's tolerance vitality and thriving civil society from a world renowned ambulance service to a socially innovative project that helps residents of the vast squatter neighborhoods find their own solutions to sanitation health care and education Drawing on interviews with a broad cross section of Karachi residents from ER doctors to architects to shopkeepers Inskeep has created a vibrant and nuanced portrait of the forces competing to shape the future of one of the world's fastest growing cities
