Natural Kinds and Classification in Scientific Practice Catherine Kendig, 2015-12-22 This edited volume of 13 new essays aims to turn past discussions of natural kinds on their head. Instead of presenting a metaphysical view of kinds based largely on an unempirical vantage point, it pursues questions of kindness which take the use of kinds and activities of kinding in practice as significant in the articulation of them as kinds. The book brings philosophical study of current and historical episodes and case studies from various scientific disciplines to bear on natural kinds as traditionally conceived of within metaphysics. Focusing on these practices reveals the different knowledge producing activities of kinding and processes involved in natural kind use, generation and discovery. Specialists in their field, the esteemed group of contributors use diverse empirically responsive approaches to explore the nature of kindhood. This groundbreaking volume presents detailed case studies that exemplify kinding in use. Newly written for this volume, each chapter engages with the activities of kinding across a variety of disciplines. Chapter topics include the nature of kinds, kindhood, kinding and kind making in linguistics, chemical classification, neuroscience, gene and protein classification, colour theory in applied mathematics, homology in comparative biology, sex and gender identity theory, memory research, race, extended cognition, symbolic algebra, cartography and geographic information science. The volume seeks to open up an as yet unexplored area within the emerging field of philosophy of science in practice and constitutes a valuable addition to the disciplines of philosophy and history of science, technology, engineering and mathematics.

Listening After Nature Mark Peter Wright, 2022-05-05 Listening After Nature examines the constructions and erasures that haunt field recording practice and discourse. Analyzing archival and contemporary soundworks through a combination of post colonial, ecological and sound studies scholarship, Mark Peter Wright recodes the field, troubles conceptions of Nature, expands site specificity and unearths hidden technocultures. What exists beyond the signal? How is agency performed and negotiated between humans and nonhumans? What exactly is a field recording and what are its pedagogical potentials? These questions are operated by a methodology of listening that incorporates the spaces of audition as well as Wright's own practice based reflections. In doing so, Listening After Nature posits a range of novel interventions. One example is the Noisy Nonsensory, a conceptual figuration with which to comprehend the presence of reticent recordists. Contact Zones and Elsewhere offers another unique contribution by reimagining the relationship between the field and studio. In the final chapter, Wright explores the microphone by tracing its critical and creative connections to natural resource extraction and contemporary practice. Listening After Nature auditions water and waste infrastructures and animals, technologies and recordists' data and stars. It grapples with the thresholds of sensory perception and anchors itself to the question: what am I not hearing? In doing so, it challenges Western universalisms that code the field whilst offering vibrant practice based possibilities.

predictions or even carry out observations without first classifying their subject matter The goal of scientific taxonomy is to come up with classification schemes that conform to nature s own Another way of putting this is that science aims to devise categories that correspond to natural kinds The interest in ascertaining the real kinds of things in nature is as old as philosophy itself but it takes on a different guise when one adopts a naturalist stance in philosophy that is when one looks closely at scientific practice and takes it as a guide for identifying natural kinds and investigating their general features This Element surveys existing philosophical accounts of natural kinds defends a naturalist alternative and applies it to case studies in a diverse set of sciences This title is also available as Open Access on Cambridge Core

Classifying Science Rick Szostak,2004 Classification is the essential first step in science The study of science as well as the practice of science will thus benefit from a detailed classification of different types of science In this book science defined broadly to include the social sciences and humanities is first unpacked into its constituent elements the phenomena studied the data used the theories employed the methods applied and the practices of scientists These five elements are then classified in turn Notably the classifications of both theory types and methods allow the key strengths and weaknesses of different theories and methods to be readily discerned and compared Connections across classifications are explored should certain theories or phenomena be investigated only with certain methods What is the proper function and form of scientific paradigms Are certain common errors and biases in scientific practice associated with particular phenomena data theories or methods The classifications point to several ways of improving both specialized and interdisciplinary research and teaching and especially of enhancing communication across communities of scholars The classifications also support a superior system of document classification that would allow searches by theory and method used as well as causal links investigated
