The Natural History of Weasels and Stoats Carolyn M. King,2007 Publisher description Nature's Gift to Neuroscience Chun-Fang Wu, Joy Alcedo, 2022-02-27 In the 1960s Sydney Brenner proposed to use the nematode worm Caenorhabditis elegans to discover the control mechanisms of animal development and to reveal how a small number of neurons generate different behaviours giving birth to a vibrant community that uses this animal model for their studies Brenner was aided in his aim by John Sulston who mapped the C elegans cell lineages from a single cell to the multicellular adult which transformed the field of developmental biology As a tribute to these two men this book captures the perspectives of some of the early pioneers of the worm community from Martin Chalfie Robert Waterston and Donald Moerman to Catherine Rankin Antony Stretton and John White It also includes contributions from subsequent generations of the community who explore the development and function of the C elegans nervous system This book features how this animal has become one of the best models for elucidating the biology of different sensory modalities and their complex behavioural outputs or how this animal's survival strategies have contributed to our understanding of ageing and neurodegeneration Thus this volume documents the development of the C elegans neuroscience field from infancy to maturity The chapters in this book were originally published as a special issue of the Journal of Neurogenetics Wyoming Wild Life, 1971 So Many Zebras, So Little Time Mark D. Drapeau, 2008-06 Force ratios are an important variable in warfare and in nature On the Serengeti large zebra herds are hunted by small prides of lions But with their overwhelming majority why don't the zebras unite and attack the lions Ecological interactions between predators and their prey are complex The mathematics underlying different types of survival strategies for attacker and evader have been worked out by ecologists While not a perfect metaphor these quantitative ecology models greatly resemble behavioral interactions during counterinsurgency operations This paper suggests a framework for other researchers to adapt and expand Indeed many of the models discussed are common to both ecologists and economists Encyclopedia of Life Sciences, 1996 An encyclopedia covering the disciplines of zoology botany evolutionary science medicine physiology human anatomy cytology and genetics Natural History, 1986 South Carolina Wildlife, 1967 Animal Consciousness Daisie Radner, Michael Radner, 1996 Any intelligent debate on the ethical treatment of animals hinges on understanding their mental processes The idea that consciousness in animals is beyond comprehension is usually traced to the 17th century philosopher Ren Descartes whose concept of animals as beast machines lacking consciousness influenced arguments for more than 200 years But in reviewing Descartes theory of mind Daisie and Michael Radner demonstrate in Animal Consciousness that he did not hold the view so frequently attributed to him In fact they contend that Descartes distinguished two types of consciousness which make it easier to discuss the conscious experiences of animals and to trace the debate into the post Darwinian era Wildlife in North Carolina, 1991
