

Chromosomes and Chromosome Number

All students in your class have characteristics passed on to them by their parents. Each characteristic, such as hair color, eye color, and height, is called a trait.

The instructions for each trait are found on chromosomes. Recall that chromosomes are found in the nuclei of cells. The DNA on the chromosomes is arranged in sections that control the production of proteins. These DNA sections are called genes. Each chromosome has about 1500 genes. Each gene has a role in the characteristics of the cell and how the cell works. Living things have thousands of genes.

Human body cells have 46 chromosomes. Chromosomes come in pairs. You have 23 chromosomes from your father and 23 chromosomes from your mother, making 23 pairs of chromosomes.

What are homologous chromosomes?

The chromosomes that make up a pair, one from each parent, are called homologous (huh MAH huh yoo) chromosomes. Homologous chromosomes are the same length and have the centromere in the same place. They also carry genes for the same traits at the same place. Look at the picture below, and see if you can spot the homologous pair.

Homologous chromosomes are similar but not identical. For example, the gene for ear shape will be located at the same place on each homologous chromosome. Although these genes code for ear shape, the gene on one chromosome might code for one ear shape. The gene on the other chromosome might code for a different ear shape.

How is chromosome number maintained in a species?

The number of chromosomes does not change from generation to generation. You have the same number of chromosomes as your parents. Gametes (GA meets), or sex cells with half the number of chromosomes, ensure the chromosome number stays the same.

The symbol n represents the number of chromosomes. In humans, n is equal to 23. A cell with n number of chromosomes is called a haploid cell. Gametes are haploid cells. ☑

The process in which one haploid gamete joins with another haploid gamete is called fertilization. After fertilization, the cell has $2n$ chromosomes— n chromosomes from the female parent plus n chromosomes from the male parent. A cell with $2n$ chromosomes is called a diploid cell. Notice that n also represents the number of chromosome pairs in an organism.

Meiosis I

Recall that most cells are formed by mitosis. During mitosis the chromosome number stays the same. Because sex cells need half the number of chromosomes, a different process of cell division is needed. Gametes are formed during a process called meiosis. Meiosis is a kind of cell division that reduces the number of chromosomes by half through the separation of homologous chromosomes. Meiosis takes place in the reproductive organs of plants and animals. During meiosis, there are two cell divisions. They are called meiosis I and meiosis II.

What happens during interphase I?

Just as in mitosis, a cell goes through interphase before undergoing meiosis. A cell in interphase carries out a variety of metabolic functions, copies its DNA, and makes proteins.

What happens during prophase I?

Meiosis I begins with prophase I. During prophase I, replicated chromosomes, consisting of two sister chromatids, condense. When that happens, the chromosomes become visible under a light microscope.

As the homologous chromosomes condense, they begin to form homologous pairs in a process called synapsis (suh NAP sus). The homologous chromosomes are held tightly together along their lengths by a protein that acts like a zipper. Prophase I continues as the chromosomes move to opposite sides of the cell.

What is crossing over?

During synapsis, the chromosomes often swap pieces of DNA. Crossing over occurs when a section of one chromosome changes place with a section of its homologous chromosome. This is shown in the figure below. The centrioles move to the opposite poles of the cell. Spindle fibers form and bind to the sister chromatids at the centromere.
