

necessary to form the bands over an old brake drum or a fixture of the same diameter as the brake drum. A brake drum mounted securely on a bench serves the purpose very well.

Fig. 87—Brake Linkage

Having re-assembled the brake bands and the drums, proceed to adjust the brakes as indicated on Page 90.

Emergency Brake

When the hand brake lever is pulled back as far as it will go without stopping the forward movement of the car, shorten the rod between the hand brake lever and the brake cross shaft by loosening the lock nuts on each side of the "Emergency Brake Rod Adjustment" and turn the turnbuckle to the right or clockwise. This adjustment controls the braking action of the emergency brake on both rear wheels and in the event that one brake should grab or take hold too quickly, they can be equalized by loosening the lock nuts just back of each emergency brake equalizer (see Fig. 86) and turn the brake rod yoke to the right to tighten on the emergency brake and to the left to loosen on the emergency brake.

After several adjustments have been made the brake levers on the cross shaft at the emergency brake equalizer may stand too far forward. This may be remedied by loosening up on the turnbuckle and then shorten the rear emergency brake pull rods by means of the adjustable rod ends. These levers should point down and toward the rear axle; that is, back of the vertical with the emergency brake released.

Examine the brakes frequently and if after considerable use you feel that practically all of the available space for adjusting has been used, new brake linings should be installed.
