German Cinema - Terror and Trauma Thomas Elsaesser, 2013-10-30. In German Cinema: Terror and Trauma. Since 1945 Thomas Elsaesser reevaluates the meaning of the Holocaust for postwar German films and culture while offering a reconsideration of trauma theory. Today Elsaesser argues that Germany's attempts at mastering the past can be seen as both a failure and an achievement, making it appropriate to speak of an ongoing guilt management that includes not only Germany but Europe as a whole. In a series of case studies which consider the work of Konrad Wolf, Alexander Kluge, Rainer Werner Fassbinder, Herbert Achterbusch and Harun Farocki as well as films made in the new century, Elsaesser tracks the different ways the Holocaust is present in German cinema from the 1950s onwards, even when it is absent or referenced in oblique and hyperbolic ways. Its most emphatically absent presence might turn out to be the compulsive afterlife of the Red Army Faction whose acts of terror in the 1970s were a response to as well as a reminder of Nazism's hold on the national imaginary. Since the end of the Cold War and 9/11 the terms of the debate around terror and trauma have shifted also in Germany where generational memory now distributes the roles of historical agency and accountability differently. Against the background of universalized victimhood a cinema of commemoration has, if anything, confirmed the violence that the past continues to exert on the present in the form of missed encounters, retroactive incidents, unintended slippages and uncanny parallels which Elsaesser revives. The full meaning of Freud's Fehlleistung calls the parapractic performativity of cultural memory.
