MicroRNAs: Key Regulators of Oncogenesis Sadegh Babashah,2014-07-08 Aberrant expression and function of microRNAs miRNAs in cancer have added a new layer of complexity to the understanding of development and progression of the disease state It has been demonstrated that miRNAs have a crucial function in oncogenesis by regulating cell proliferation and apoptosis as oncogenes or tumor suppressors The expression signatures of miRNAs provide exciting opportunities in the diagnosis prognosis and therapy of cancer Since miRNAs can function as either oncogenes or tumor suppressor genes in oncogenesis the potential of using these small RNAs as therapeutic targets opens up new opportunities for cancer therapy by either inhibiting or augmenting their activity

Slack,2011 MicroRNAs have recently emerged as key regulators of gene expression during development and are frequently misexpressed in human disease states in particular cancer These 22 nucleotide long transcripts act to promote or repress cell proliferation migration and apoptosis during development all of which are processes that go awry in cancer Thus microRNAs have the ability to behave like oncogenes or tumor suppressors In addition their small size and molecular properties make them amenable as targets and therapeutics in cancer treatment This book goes into detail on how microRNAs represent a paradigm shift in thinking about gene regulation during development and disease and provide the oncologist with a potentially powerful new battery of agents to diagnose and treat cancer of MicroRNAs in Autocrine HGH-mediated Oncogenesis Mikhail Pertziger,2014 MicroRNAs miRNAs are short 17-25 nucleotide RNAs which are ubiquitous regulators of gene expression Regulation of miRNA expression has recently been highlighted as a key aspect affecting the pathogenesis of many types of malignancies including breast and colon cancer Furthermore regulation of the enzymes involved in miRNA processing has also been implicated in the development and progression of several cancers including breast cancer The human growth hormone hGH insulin like growth factor 1 IGF 1 axis has emerged as an important mediator of tumour development Tumoral hGH expression positively correlates with lymph node metastasis tumour stage HER 2 status and poor outcome in breast cancer patients Recent reports suggest that the hGH IGF 1 axis may influence the expression of miRNAs and this study investigates whether miRNA expression and the expression of key proteins involved in miRNA processing are affected by autocrine hGH in breast and colon cancer cells The study also assessed the functional implications of autocrine hGH expression in colon carcinoma cells Our initial findings demonstrate that forced expression of hGH in colon carcinoma cells increases total cell number by increasing cell proliferation and survival and stimulates anchorage independent cell growth and motility Conversely functional inhibition of endogenously expressed hGH decreases total cell number due to reduced proliferation and survival and inhibits anchorage independent cell growth and motility Autocrine hGH modulates miRNA expression profiles in both breast and colon cancer cells increasing expression of several oncogenic miRNAs and reducing expression of tumour suppressive miRNAs One consequence of such deregulation is increased Nuclear Factor KappaB NFkB activity in hGH expressing breast cancer cells Furthermore autocrine hGH decreases the expression of components of the miRNA biogenesis pathway Drosha and Dicer and modulates the expression of Ago1 and Ago2 in mammary carcinoma cells Our findings demonstrate that autocrine hGH enhances the oncogenicity of colon carcinoma cells In addition autocrine hGH regulates the expression of a subset of miRNAs in breast and colon carcinoma cells and regulates the expression of key proteins involved in miRNA processing in breast cancer cells Thus deregulation of miRNA physiology may be one mechanism whereby autocrine hGH contributes to tumour progression
