Abstract: The purpose of this study was to investigate the effects of a 12-week training program on the physical and psychological health of sedentary, middle-aged women. The program consisted of three sessions per week, each lasting 45 minutes. The first session was a warm-up, the second was a cardiovascular workout, and the third was a strength training session. The results showed that the program had a significant positive effect on the women's physical health, including improvements in cardiovascular fitness, muscle strength, and body composition. Additionally, the program also had a positive effect on the women's psychological health, leading to improvements in mood, self-esteem, and overall quality of life. The findings of this study suggest that a structured exercise program can be an effective intervention for promoting the health and well-being of sedentary, middle-aged women.
