Discussion Staphylococcus aureus is a common cause of skin and soft tissue infections. It is also a leading cause of hospital-acquired infections. The purpose of this study was to determine the prevalence of S. aureus in the community in the city of Hama, Syria. The results of this study show that the prevalence of S. aureus in the community is 10.5%. This is a relatively high prevalence, especially in a developing country like Syria. The results also show that the prevalence of S. aureus is higher in the city center than in the suburbs. This may be due to the higher population density in the city center. The results also show that the prevalence of S. aureus is higher in the summer than in the winter. This may be due to the higher humidity in the summer. The results of this study have important implications for public health. They show that S. aureus is a common cause of skin and soft tissue infections in the community in the city of Hama, Syria. This information can be used to develop strategies to prevent and control S. aureus infections.
