identity have become highly debated topics in Ukraine. This monograph explores not only how national identity is being reconstructed by the Ukrainian state but also the processes by which it is negotiated through society. The central argument of this work is that too much attention concerning identity in Ukraine has focused on markers of ethnicity and language. Instead the author advocates a regional approach engaging with the issue of how Ukraine's regional differences affect nation building processes. Following the tumultuous events of the Orange Revolution the view of Ukraine as a country inherently divided between East and West has re-emerged to become a popular explanation for political events. The study outlines the necessity for academics, policymakers and indeed politicians to veer away from this simplistic West versus East divide. The book advocates an analysis of Ukraine's unique brand of regionalism not in terms of divisions but in terms of regional differences and diversity. The author deconstructs the concept of Eastern Ukraine by focusing on three Ukrainian localities all adjacent to the Ukrainian-Russian border. The study examines how individuals provide their own understanding of the place of their region within the wider processes of nation building across Ukraine. In doing so the book develops a regional approach to the study of identity politics in Ukraine.

Carnahan, 1890 The Relationship Between Fiction and History Susanne Gierds, 2010-04

Essay from the year 2009 in the subject English Literature Works grade 1 1 The University of Sydney course Fiction Writers at Work language English abstract It stands to reason that historical and political discourses are only two of many paths leading to a truthful representation of the past. While historians and theorists struggle with the challenges of extreme interpretative relativism fiction allows ideas that relate to questions of history and identity to be played out in a non-instructional setting. The poststructuralist tendencies in the arts and social sciences are best embodied in literature by the rise of the historical fiction genre. The fact that several of the novels on the 2009 Booker Prize longlist are part of the genre shows that historical fiction has been enthusiastically embraced by the wider literary community. Concurrently the relationship between fiction and history has become a much debated topic in Australian culture. By discussing the role of history in three notable Australian novels David Malouf's Ransom David Brooks' The Umbrella Club and James Bradley's The Resurrectionist the essay investigates how important the historical is to the fictional and vice versa.
