Health Science in 903B

Basic Principles of Packaging Medications

Special Requirements of Prescription Medications

Some medications should be prepared in the same containers used for their packaging for their protection.

original glass containers for parenteral infusions
No separate containers and medications
Should be individualized and have a prescription for the patient
Easy to administer and manage for the patient
Labels on the containers

Other Requirements of Prescription Medications

Not all NHA-ExCPT study materials correspond to the following requirements for prescription medications.

Prescription

Many medications are packaged medications and the medication does not need to be packaged when dispensed from the physician. There are several reasons for this practice.

1. To reduce the chance the need will be exceeded by the manufacturer.

2. To reduce the chance of contamination.

3. To reduce the chance the medication will be tampered with.

4. To reduce the chance the medication will be used for other purposes, particularly in the case of controlled substances.

Label Requirements for Prescription Medications

Prescription labels should be filled with the following information: Name of the prescription, Name of the manufacturer, Authorization information for use, Prescription information and packaging information.

Other Requirements for OTC Medications

OTC medications are those that are available over the counter (nonprescription) and over the counter (OTC) medications. The label should include:

1. Product name
2. Manufacturer's name
3. Name of distributor
4. Authorization information for use
5. Prescription information and packaging information

Label Requirements for OTC Medications
