Nichols, 2000-02-25 Like all complex living systems a family during its life course proceeds through predictable stages of development Yet every family is different its uniqueness defined and continually redefined by an open ended array of structural biological and sociocultural variables And as with all living things a family's continued well being depends upon its ability to adapt to changes arising from both within the family system and without First postulated in the 1940s these basic ideas constitute the conceptual core of modern family development theory From them has blossomed an impressive body of knowledge about family health and illness without which much of the progress occurring in family therapy over the past half century would not have been possible This book does much to
