

Pearson SuccessMaker Case Study - Key Takeaways

- Although it had been adequate in the past, the waterfall approach to SuccessMaker's development was growing more inefficient. Management and internal teams noticed a trend in divergence between expectations and delivered product. Customer goals were not met with newer releases of software. A main issue with the waterfall approach was the development team was driving the decisions instead of product management. To maintain Pearson's success, an alternative to the waterfall methodology needed to be implemented. Greg Adams-Woodford, the vice-president of product management, facilitated the implementation of an agile approach to software development.
- Adopting to a new product development process was not a simple or easy task. A lot of time and resources were invested in preparation of the transition. An agile expert was brought in to conduct three days of training for the development teams. Not all team members were proponents of the new methodology, and some employees even resigned as the changes were instated.
- Certain teams found an agile approach to be more beneficial than others. Product owners and managers liked the new methodology because they became more directly involved with the development process. The quality assurance team disliked the agile approach because they could not rely on the developers detailed documentation like they could before. Some groups wandered back to their waterfall tendencies. During testing phases, a few members adopted their own "mini-waterfall" approach.
- Equal adoption to the new methodology was not reciprocated across all teams. This transition was not implemented across the entire Pearson organization. In fact, the SuccessMaker software development team was the only functional group to make the change. This caused timeline complications when work was needed from external teams who did not operate by agile methodology.
- Overall, teams that embrace the agile approach are becoming more efficient. Since the transition, SuccessMaker's software releases have become better aligned with the needs of the customers and the goals of the organization. Although the implementation has raised many problems, the development team is benefiting from the new strategy. Moving forward, Pearson will continue to push towards modernizing its development processes.
