Migration And Remittances Factbook 2016 Third Edition:

Migration and Remittances Factbook 2016 Dilip Ratha, Christian Eigen-Zucchi, Sonia Plaza, 2016-04-08 Remittances remain a key source of funds for developing countries far exceeding official development assistance and even foreign direct investment. Remittances have proved to be more stable than private debt and portfolio equity flows and less volatile than official aid flows and their annual flow can match or surpass foreign exchange reserves in many small countries. Even in large emerging markets such as India remittances are equivalent to at least a quarter of total foreign exchange reserves. India, China, Philippines, and Mexico are the top recipients of migrant remittances. The Migration and Remittances Factbook 2016 attempts to present numbers and facts behind the stories of international migration and remittances drawing on authoritative publicly available data. It provides a snapshot of statistics on immigration, emigration, skilled emigration, and remittance flows for 210 countries and 15 regional and income groups. The Migration and Remittances Factbook 2016 updates the 2011 edition of the Factbook with additional data on bilateral migration and remittances and second generation diasporas collected from various sources including national censuses, labor force surveys, population registers, and other national sources.

Perspectives on Global Development 2017 International Migration in a Shifting World OECD, 2016-12-12

Dynamic development, shifting demographics and changing diets

Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, International Fund for Agricultural Development, 2019-04-12 Asia and the Pacific is experiencing major demographic shifts and urbanizing rapidly. Agriculture technologies, remote sensing, drones, and sensors are emerging with potentially profound implications for the entire food system and management of the natural resource base. Structural transformation of the economy has also changed the nature of the food security problem. Earlier, many governments thought that producing more staple food was sufficient to improve food security. However, today's economy is increasingly based on human capital and less on physical strength. Policies and programmes promote healthy diets for healthy people. This need for improved nutrition will require shifts in agricultural production and trade patterns. Solving the malnutrition problem in urban areas will also require different solutions than in rural areas due to the difference in urban and rural food environments. In line with the structural transformation of the economy, farm households also increasingly rely on non-farm income to support their livelihoods and risk management strategies, which has implications for the uptake of new technologies. The demographic shifts, urbanization, and structural changes in the economy, coupled with climate change, have made the food security and nutrition problem more complex than it was in the past. Solutions require input from different stakeholders, both public and private, as well as a range of government ministries, including Health, Finance, Education, Environment, Trade, and Social Welfare, in addition to Agriculture.

Migration and Remittances Factbook 2008 Dilip Ratha, Zhimei (Jamie) Xu, 2008-02-22. The Migration and Remittances Factbook 2008 attempts to present the numbers and facts behind the stories of international migration and remittances drawing on authoritative publicly available data. It provides a snapshot of statistics on immigration, emigration, skilled emigration and remittance flows for 194 countries and 13 regional and income groups. Some interesting facts from the Factbook: Nearly 200 million people or 3 percent of the world population live outside their countries of birth. Current migration flows relative to population are weaker than those of the last decades of the nineteenth century. The volume of South-South migration is almost as large as that of South-North migration. International migration is dominated by voluntary migration which is driven by economic factors. In 2005 refugees numbered only 13.5 million or just over 7 percent of international migrants. The share of refugees in the population of low-income countries was more than five times larger than the share in high-income OECD countries. Worldwide remittance flows are estimated to have exceeded 318 billion in 2007 of which developing countries received 240 billion. The true size including unrecorded flows through formal and informal channels is believed to be significantly larger.

Migration and Remittances Factbook, 2008 Migration and Remittances

During the Global Financial Crisis and Beyond Ibrahim Sirkeci, Jeffrey H. Cohen, Dilip Ratha, 2012-05-30. During the 2008 financial crisis the possible changes in remittance sending behavior and potential avenues to alleviate a probable decline in remittance flows became concerns. This book brings together a wide array of studies from around the world focusing on the recent trends in remittance flows. The authors have gathered a select group of researchers from academic, practitioner and policy making bodies. Thus the book can be seen as a conversation between the different stakeholders involved in or affected by remittance flows globally The book is a first of its kind attempt to analyze the effects of an ongoing crisis on remittance flows globally Data analyzed by the book reveals three trends First The more diversified the destinations and the labour markets for migrants the more resilient are the remittances sent by migrants Second the lower the barriers to labor mobility the stronger the link between remittances and economic cycles in that corridor And third as remittances proved to be relatively resilient in comparison to private capital flows many remittance dependent countries became even more dependent on remittance inflows for meeting external financing needs There are several reasons for migration and remittances to be relatively resilient to the crisis First remittances are sent by the stock cumulative flows of migrants not only by the recent arrivals in fact recent arrivals often do not remit as regularly as they must establish themselves in their new homes Second contrary to expectations return migration did not take place as expected even as the financial crisis reduced employment opportunities in the US and Europe Third in addition to the persistence of migrant stocks that lent persistence to remittance flows existing migrants often absorbed income shocks and continued to send money home Fourth if some migrants did return or had the intention to return they tended to take their savings back to their country of origin Finally exchange rate movements during the crisis caused unexpected changes in remittance behavior as local currencies of many remittance recipient countries depreciated sharply against the US dollar they produced a sale effect on remittance behavior of migrants in the US and other destination countries
