MICROECONOMICS

OVERVIEW

Microeconomics is the study of how individuals and firms make choices and allocate scarce resources. It focuses on the behavior of individuals and firms in making decisions regarding the allocation of scarce resources and the interactions among these decisions.

KEY ECONOMICS QUESTIONS INCLUDE:

1. What is production?
2. How is it produced?
3. Who gets the product?

APPLYING ECONOMIC THEORY TO PROBLEMS:

The alternative combinations of final goods and services that could be produced in a given time period with all available and technology resources are called the production possibilities frontier (PPF).

THEORY:

1. Efficiency: Appropriately using all resources in the production of final goods and services. Production is efficient if all resources are used in the most efficient way possible.
2. Scarcity: The limited nature of resources. Scarcity is the condition that arises because resources are limited and human wants are unlimited.
3. Choice: The decision to allocate resources to one use or another.
4. Opportunity Cost: The cost of an action in terms of the next best alternative that must be forgone.

THEORY IN ACTION:

1. Production Possibilities Frontier (PPF): A graph showing the trade-off between two goods that can be produced with a given set of resources and technology.
2. Shifts in the PPF: Changes in the PPF are caused by changes in the quantity or quality of resources or changes in technology.
