The Role of

Inflammation in Organ Injury Xin Zhang,Di Fan,Lijun Cheng,Can Hu,2025-11-19 Inflammation is implicated in the pathogenesis of various diseases including cardiovascular pulmonary and renal diseases The induction of inflammation involves different cell types and cytokines which is further amplified by the crosstalk among these cells and cytokines In response to organ injury damage associated molecular patterns and pathogen associated molecular patterns bind to the specific pattern recognition receptors and subsequently transduce the extracellular stimuli to intracellular signaling network to induce the expression and release of inflammatory cytokines These cytokines recruit resident or circulating leukocytes to the injury site which in turn produce excessive inflammatory mediators creating a vicious circle While inflammation initially helps to remove the injured tissue or cell debris necessary for tissue healing uncontrolled inflammation eventually leads to cell senescence pyroptosis apoptosis and organ dysfunction Therefore elucidating the molecular mechanisms of inflammation and optimizing the inflammatory process are promising therapeutic strategies for treating organ injury The goal of this Research Topic is to provide a forum to advance research on elucidating the molecular mechanisms of inflammation in organ injury and to develop efficient therapeutic strategies for these diseases We welcome the submission of Reviews Original Research articles Perspectives and Methods covering but are not restricted to the following topics 1 Inflammatory modulation based on gene delivery or natural products for organ injury 2 Investigation of molecular mechanisms for inflammation during organ injury using multi omics approaches such as single cell sequencing transcriptomics proteomics and metabolomics 3 The role of inflammation in mediating cross talk between cells or organs 4 Diagnostic value of plasma inflammatory cytokines for organ injury Please note Manuscripts consisting solely of computational analysis of bioinformatics or public genomic or transcriptional databases without validation independent cohort or in vitro or in vivo biological validation are outside the scope of this section and are not accepted as part of this research topic Manuscript dealing with traditional or complementary medicine without a very strong focus on immunological parameters are out of scope for this journal Index Medicus ,2004 Vols for 1963 include as pt 2 of the Jan issue Medical subject headings

Orphan Crops:

Breeding and Biotechnology for Sustainable Agriculture, Food and Nutrition Simon E. Bull,Jill Margaret Farrant,Rita Hogan Mumm,Zerihen Tadele,2024-01-18 Orphan crops play an important role in food and nutrition security especially in growing economies where small holder farmers produce the majority of food Despite their importance in global agriculture and their often remarkable nutrient content and adaptation to challenging environmental conditions orphan crops have received limited attention by the scientific community and industry. However, the diversity of neglected plant species provides a large genetic resource that could significantly contribute to broadening the biodiversity of trait desired crops for novel value chains, sustainable development and food security. The uptake of new plant breeding techniques, notably genome editing as well as omic tools, are now accelerating translation of basic research and facilitating the exploration of orphan crops. These advancements also give rise to public and political engagement discussions to maximize socio-economic impact. Given that the greatest need for food and nutritional security is in growing economies, issues of food sovereignty and sustainability of their food systems become front and centre. There is now an exceptional opportunity to tackle some of the major current challenges in agriculture, including climate change, sustainable cropping systems, food quality and nutritional security through broadening research in wild relatives of crops and on orphan species. This Research Topic seeks to showcase research on neglected plants using advanced molecular technologies, e.g. genome sequencing, omics, etc. and new plant breeding approaches, methods and tools. This Research Topic will also discuss the challenges and opportunities arising when modern breeding techniques are applied for translational research.
