Recent Chinese policies of raising taxes and cutting export quotas combined with its temporary ban on REE exports led not only to steadily increasing prices. Most notably it created uncertainty among companies producing outside China whether they will be able to get sufficient amounts of REE in the future and how much this is going to cost Because it will take several years until Western mining capacities meet Western companies demand some manufacturers in need of REE have already started to relocate their factories to China Beijing claims that their policies are dedicated to tackle environmental problems which have been caused by mining REE However taken into account that Beijing policies also require Chinese partners for foreign companies that operate within China Western companies that relocate their facilities may risk handing over knowledge to future competitors Aware of the consequences that Beijing's new fondness for environmental issues brings governments and companies especially in Japan the U.S. and Europe try to find ways to decrease their dependencies This report examines factors that led to China's dominance on the REE market today and presents some counteractions which governments and companies in Japan the U.S. and Europe have introduced to mitigate this situation The two principal findings of this report are first because Western mining companies will need time to meet their companies demand the current situation is going to sustain for at least a few more years to come and second although China runs the risk of selling off its REE resources abroad which it needs for its own economy at home it may benefit from the technology trans

Learning-assisted Diagnosis and Control of Electric Distribution

Network Chaolong Zhang,Xiao Wang,Aihong Tang,Weihang Yan,David Gao,2025-08-08 The digital transformation of modern power systems enables more robust and transparent system planning and operation This process is highly reliant on big data which is widely available through energy generation to utilization The distribution networks are exposed to high challenges due to the massive integration of renewables and electric vehicles at low voltages but opportunities do exist due to the widely available infrastructure for data collection and smart control at the distribution level For example the phase measurement unit PMU for better system observation in the transmission system has been extended to the distribution network where standard protocols are available for high precision data transmission in a sub second timescale Artificial intelligence AI technologies become the main enabler to utilize these data. This provides revolutionary solutions covering fault diagnosis control and almost all aspects of modern electric power systems. The values of AI in distribution networks are widely recognized especially for the increased complexity of distribution systems where active management and autonomous operation are urgently needed. The typical mechanism based modeling and model based control lack adaptability under an evolving environment e g network topology changes that are more frequent at the distribution level. However the existing AI technologies as well as the associated machine learning algorithms cannot be directly transplanted into the area of power systems. To fulfill the strict technical requirements in power systems for security generalization capability, interpretability out of sample performance, robustness and reliability are the main issues to be addressed before their massive deployment. Therefore this Research Topic aims to provide a contribution in line with this area of research i e innovative approaches and schemes for learning assisted diagnosis and control for the medium to low voltage distribution networks. Original work focusing on the applications of state of art AI technologies in the power and energy related fields are invited. Both high quality Original Research and Review Articles are welcome about the latest progress and potential research applications of the relevant areas with interests in modeling, control, monitoring and diagnosis of the distribution network using AI related techniques.
