

Record numbers this wildfire season are unprecedented. More than 10,000 blazes, including the largest and most destructive, shattered records and caused an estimated $16 billion in damages. But the fires also brought record-breaking rain totals. These record-breaking fires have record-breaking names, including the most destructive wildfire ever to sweep across the state, the most acres burned, the most homes destroyed, and the most people forced to flee their homes.

Another bright spot this year: More than a quarter of the state's power comes from solar power, the largest percentage in the nation. That solar shift will likely continue as more solar energy and battery storage installations are built. These new technologies will become the norm, as the state's utility regulators have already proposed more aggressive rules to facilitate solar power. This year, the state's utility regulators also proposed a new rule to allow utility companies to offer residential solar power to customers at a discount, a move that could help reduce the cost of solar power.

Planning continues for the next major wildfire in California, possibly starting this fall. The state's utility regulators are already working on a plan to reduce the risk of future wildfires. The plan includes better firebreaks, more water, increased野火 risk reduction funding, and more aggressive planning. The utility regulators also plan to increase the state's utility companies'野火 risk reduction funding, and to encourage companies to invest in firebreaks and other measures to reduce the risk of future wildfires.

Best Ideas for Teaching with Technology Justin Reich, Tom

Daccord, 2015-02-18 This practical how to guide makes it easy for teachers to incorporate the latest technology in their classes. Employing an informal workshop approach, the book avoids technical jargon and pays special attention to the needs of teachers who are expanding the use of computers in their classrooms. The authors focus on what teachers do and how they can do it better and provide a wide variety of proven tools, tips and methods for enhancing these activities with technology.

Best Ideas for Teaching with Technology provides extensively illustrated tutorials for a wide variety of software, online tools and teaching techniques. It covers everything from lesson plans to time management, how to show animation, blogging, podcasts, laptop strategies and much, much more. In addition, periodic updates to the text will be available on the authors website.

After City of Chicago V. Jesus Morales, 2000 This resource guide is intended to help teachers lead their students through an exploration of the issues and story of After Chicago v Morales. The guide explains that in 1992 the city of Chicago, Illinois passed an ordinance authorizing the police to arrest people in a group if they failed to move along or were thought to belong to a gang. After the constitutionality of the law was challenged at all levels in the Illinois courts, it was declared unconstitutional by the Illinois Supreme Court and the decision was upheld by the U.S. Supreme Court. The guide finds that maintenance of public order, preservation of civil liberties, homelessness and racial discrimination are some of the issues raised by After Chicago v Morales. The guide may supplement a study of the U.S. Constitution as an example of how legislation and the Constitution interact. Classes concerned with society's problems and classes to develop critical thinking. The guide seeks to provide teachers with substantive background from a variety of perspectives and sources for use in history, government, sociology, writing and literature classes. It is divided into four chapters: 1. Terms and Vocabulary; 2. Background about the Case; 3. The U.S. Supreme Court Case; and 4. Related Issues. Each chapter contains teaching activities and discussion questions. Includes 98 notes, a list of teaching resources, appendixes and primary resources.
