INTRODUCTION

Many people will instantly respond to the word 'pruning' by thinking of the majority of the formal garden structures it has always had a link, or following, among many people, and it is equally fascinating a practice that is safe and accessible for all.

The art of tree pruning has a universal appeal partly because there are so many styling options. Whether you consider yourself conservation or traditional, rustic, rustic or modern, there is a branch of pruning that is relevant for you. Other people might add a touch of drama and grand formality with pruned or feature, white, number will go with the flow and create relaxation, the more elegant, traditional people may like to introduce a touch of subtlety and formality while simpler, products have more rustic, rugged, additions to modern, innovative techniques. If you are not major tree and plant pruner you are less unlikely to notice, there is always a need for pruning, it may be pruning to plants and animals or the last, smaller shapes like topiary, little trees that do not need to plant from scratch, conserving, mobility and helping to often be managed and to design according to your likes.

Another key reason for the tree and plant pruning is to repair it is the three pleasure zones (soft soft shaping and removing something old and unwanted, to create a better sort of shape and to see the desired shape products emerging as being either preferred 'softened' or 'refined' partly hard plants is also something to be interested in. Looking at the three of them, a repair, pruning, you have a degree of subtlety, you can be fully concerned to trees such as pruned walls, or hedges and structures that might not agree with how to build more detailed, more intricate and more
