

• Respiratory Infection →

- Described according to anatomic area of involvement: →
 - Upper respiratory tract → consists of oronasopharynx, pharynx, larynx, and upper part of trachea
 - Lower respiratory tract → consists of lower trachea, mainstem bronchi, segmental bronchi, sub-segmental bronchioles, terminal bronchioles, and alveoli
 - Infections of epiglottis and larynx → categorized as croup syndromes
- Often spread from one structure to another due to contiguous nature of mucous membrane lining entire tract
- Account for majority of acute illnesses in children
 - Infants are nose breathers
 - < 6 years old → most common breathing pattern = diaphragmatic
- Most infections caused by viruses → respiratory syncytial virus (RSV), adenoviruses, parainfluenza viruses, pneumonia
- RSV can cause severe respiratory compromise in infants
- < 5 years old = very susceptible to upper respiratory infections (URIs)
- > 6 years old = → bacterial infections
- Etiology → influenced by age of child, season, living conditions, and preexisting medical problems

Age	Site	Resistance	Seasonal Variations
• < 3 months = ↓ infection rate vs. older children → due to protective function of maternal antibodies	• Smaller child = smaller airway	• Deficiencies of immune system place child at risk for infection	• Most common season for URI = late fall
• 3 - 6 months = ↑ infection rate (maternal antibodies disappear and infant develops own antibodies)	• Diameter of airways is smaller in young children = ↑ risk for considerable narrowing from edematous mucous membranes and ↑ production of secretions	• ↓ resistance due to malnutrition, anemia, fatigue, and chilling of body	• Most common respiratory pathogens appear during winter and spring months
• Viral infection rate remains ↑ during toddler and preschool years	• Distance between structures within respiratory tract is shorter in young child → organisms may move rapidly down respiratory tract = ↑ extensive involvement	• Allergies, preterm birth, broncho-pulmonary dysplasia (BPD), asthma, history of RSV infection, cardiac anomalies, cystic fibrosis (CF)	• Mycoplasmal infections occur more often in autumn and early winter
	• Relatively short and open eustachian tube in infants and young children allows pathogens easy access to middle ear	• Day care attendance	• Infection-related asthma occurs more frequently during cold weather
		• Smoke in home	• RSV typically occurs during winter and spring

- Manifestations → infants and young children, especially between 6 months - 3 years, react more severely to acute respiratory tract infections vs. older children

Respiratory Sounds	Sore Throat	Anorexia
<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Sounds associated with respiratory disease → hoarseness, grunting, stridor, wheezing, cough • Common feature = cough → may be evident only during acute phase and can persist several months after disease • Auscultation sounds → wheezing, crackles, absence of breath sounds 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Frequent complaint of older children • Young children are unable to describe symptoms → may not complain even when highly inflamed • Child will often refuse to take oral fluids or solids 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Common with most childhood illnesses • Frequently 1st evidence of illness • Persists to a greater or lesser degree throughout febrile stage of illness • Often extends into convalescence
