Ngo Accountability Ngo Accountability:

Non-Governmental Organisations - Performance and Accountability Michael Edwards, David Hulme, 2014-03-18

The last decade has seen some significant changes in international development and in the status of non governmental organisations operating in the field Not only has the number of NGOs virtually doubled many of them have seen a considerable growth in their budgets and have grown closer to governments and official aid agencies NGOs are acknowledged by many to be more effective agents of development than governments or commercial interests even as a magic bullet for development problems Despite these positive trends the real impact of the NGO sector is not well documented This is partly because NGO performance assessment and accountability methods are weak and partly because NGOs are caught up increasingly in the world of official aid which pushes them towards certain forms of evaluation at the expense of others This unique book takes a hard and critical look at these issues and describes how NGOs can and must improve the way they measure and account for their performance if they are to be truly effective Debating NGO

Accountability Jem Bendell, 2006 Concerns about the role and accountability of NGOs have been voiced from different quarters in recent years Some donors governments corporations and international agencies raise important questions about the effectiveness of NGO work and the legitimacy of their advocacy Some NGOs have also recognized the need to ensure good practice in the wider voluntary sector For this emerging agenda to lead to positive development outcomes we need to ask what initiatives will improve the accountability of all institutions to the people whose lives they shape and what initiatives could serve merely to undermine NGOs useful and largely accepted role in holding business and government accountable for their actions This publication puts democracy and human rights at the centre of the debate about NGO accountability

NGO Accountability Lisa Jordan, Peter van Tuijl, 2012-05-04 As the fastest growing segment of civil society as well as featuring prominently in the global political arena NGOs are under fire for being unaccountable But who do NGOs actually represent Who should they be accountable to and how This book provides the first comprehensive examination of the issues and politics of NGO accountability across all sectors and internationally It offers an assessment of the key technical tools available including legal accountability certification and donor based accountability regimes and questions whether these are appropriate and viable options or attempts to roll back NGOs to a more one dimensional function as organizers of national and global charity Input and case studies are provided from NGOs such as ActionAid and from every part of the globe including China Indonesia and Uganda In the spirit of moving towards greater accountability the book looks in detail at innovations that have developed from within NGOs and offers new approaches and flexible frameworks that enable accountability to become a reality for all parties worldwide Environmentalism and NGO Accountability Kemi C.

Yekini, Liafisu Sina Yekini, Paschal Ohalehi, 2020-11-27 It is increasingly being recognised across society that the preservation of our natural environment should shape political economic and social policies This book delves into the partnership of non governmental organisations NGOs Environmental NGOs ENGOs their communities and their governmental counterparts in responding to this need

NGO Accountability Lisa D. Jordan, 2007 NGO Accountability from an NGO Perspective Khaldoun Abou Assi, Deborah L Trent, 2020 Extant research in the nonprofit literature focuses on NGO accountability framing it relationally We examine the interplay of several constitutive elements of NGO donor relationships based on narratives of NGO executives NGO perceptions of accountability and of their donors their assumptions about donor perceptions of the NGO role and expectations of NGO accountability and their responses to shifts in donor funding We argue that perceptions and practices of accountability not only determine to whom an NGO should be primarily accountable but also shape NGO behavior and alter dependence on donors As such accountability is not necessarily a consequence of a relationship but more likely a constitutive element of the relationship While a favourable response to donor interests might signify upward accountability it might also suggest that NGOs are more assertive about managing their institutional environments and thereby mitigate their dependence on donors

Overcoming Ngo Accountability Concerns in International Governance Erik B. Bluemel, 2014 Most scholars treat NGOs as a homogenous group and base their theoretical and normative arguments around such a generalization even when recognizing that NGOs vary significantly on a number of levels This Article seeks to advance the literature on NGO accountability by unpacking NGOs by functional role in international governance relating the functional roles of NGOs to accountability theory This Article proposes that participation of NGOs in international governance should not always depend upon democratic accountability Instead the accountability required of NGOs when participating in international governance should depend upon the particular function performed As a result the accountability mechanisms used to achieve such accountability will necessarily vary by function Failing to recognize this theories which elaborate theories of NGO participation in international governance have missed the mark focusing primarily on ensuring greater accountability of NGOs generally This Article seeks to remove the debate from the provision of accountability from the level of the actor to that of function Part I begins with a discussion of accountability in international governance establishing a general typology of accountability mechanisms based largely upon the work of Grant and Keohane Part II then describes some of the different functions performed by NGOs in international governance providing examples of how such systems are arranged under existing frameworks and illustrating the relationship between the function performed and the accountability needed Part III seeks to refine NGO accountability theory by proposing a new model to guide NGO participation in international governance which links accountability to function Part III also identifies some concerns in implementing the theory The Article concludes by calling for further research into the costs of implementing this new framework so an appropriate balance between fairness operability and accountability may be reached in international governance

Evaluating Transnational NGOs J. Steffek, K. Hahn, 2010-04-14 Critics question the representativeness of NGOs the democratic quality of their internal procedures and their accountability to the wider public This volume written jointly by academics and practitioners clarifies the issues at stake and controversially discusses proposals for reform
