framework frontline officer s attitudes and understanding of restorative justice and police culture beliefs are examined and then their impact on frontline police work is assessed This study employs an explanatory sequential mixed methods design and is conducted in two phases The initial quantitative phase involved distributing a Likert style survey to frontline officers to measure their attitudes and understanding of restorative justice and police culture variables After analysis of the initial quantitative findings semi structured interview questions were developed building on these findings to provide for a more in depth qualitative analysis Results indicate that police culture variables such as solidarity teamwork crime fighting and tough on crime attitudes are still persistent in policing but frontline officers are generally accepting of restorative justice and believe that it has a place in their frontline work as a dispositional tool Findings indicate however that officers perceive restorative justice as another option only for less serious crimes and low risk offenders and not as a new method of managing offender activity Restorative justice is not being used to its fullest potential To increase use of RJ diversion more thorough training specialist designations and supervisory and middle management direction is recommended
