We started in a wash room and conquered the world. And in between, we've scored big and sometimes struggled to reach our goals. We've done our best for the best. We've improved and grown. Looking ahead to the future, always remembering where we came from. This is our story.

Every great story has a beginning. This one started in a small town in Bavaria, Germany. After starting out in his mother's wash kitchen, Adi Dassler registered the 'Gebrüder Dassler Schuhfabrik' in 1924 and embarked on his mission to provide athletes with the best possible equipment. A few years later, his older brother Rudolf joined the business, which became Dassler Brothers Shoe Factory (Gebrüder Dassler Schuhfabrik). The electricity supply in Herzogenaurach was unreliable, so the brothers sometimes had to use pedal power from a stationary bicycle to run their equipment.

Dassler assisted in the development of spiked running shoes (spikes) for multiple athletic events. To enhance the quality of spiked athletic footwear, he transitioned from a previous model of heavy metal spikes to utilising canvas and rubber. In 1936, Dassler persuaded U.S. sprinter Jesse Owens to use his hand-made spikes at the 1936 Summer Olympics. Following Owens' four gold medals, the name and reputation of Dassler shoes became known to the world's sportsmen and their trainers. Business was successful and the Dasslers were selling 200.000 pairs of shoes every year before World War II.

The Dassler factory, used for production of anti-tank weapons during the Second World War, was nearly destroyed in 1945 by US forces, but it was spared when Adolf Dassler's wife convinced the GIs that the company and its employees were only interested in manufacturing sports shoes. American occupying forces subsequently became major buyers of the Dassler brothers' shoes.

Adi Dassler died on September 6 1978, shortly before his 78th birthday. The man who almost single-handedly redefined the sporting goods industry and lifted the benchmark by a mile left behind a flourishing company. The end of one Dassler era became the start of another: Adi's wife Käthe, with support from her son Horst, took over.... (to be continued :)

Adidas: How the rivalry with Puma shaped the brand's identity MAX EDITORIAL, 2025-04-15 Adidas Origins and Historical Context The story of Adidas begins in a small town in Germany called Herzogenaurach a place that despite its modest size played a monumental role in the creation of two of the world's biggest sports brands Adidas and Puma To understand how this rivalry shaped Adidas identity it is essential to explore its origins and the historical context that surrounded it At the beginning of the 20th century Adolf Dassler better known as Adi Dassler began making handmade shoes in his home He was passionate about sports and had a clear vision to create shoes that would improve the performance of athletes In 1924 he founded Gebr der Dassler Schuhfabrik Dassler Brothers Shoe Factory together with his brother Rudolf Dassler Together they began producing high quality sports shoes that quickly gained popularity among local athletes The company's early success was driven by innovation Adi Dassler was a natural inventor always looking for ways to improve his products One of the brand's early milestones was the development of shoes with removable studs which allowed athletes to adjust traction based on terrain conditions This innovation was widely adopted by elite runners of the time and helped cement Dassler's reputation as a brand of excellence in the sport However success did not come without challenges The 1930s were marked by political and economic turmoil in Germany with the rise of the Nazi regime During this period the Dassler brothers faced external pressures that would ultimately have a profound impact on the company's future Despite these difficulties Dassler continued to grow sponsoring athletes and participating in international sporting events The relationship between Adi and Rudolf however began to deteriorate Differences in personality and business acumen became increasingly evident While Adi was meticulous and focused on product quality Rudolf was more ambitious and interested in rapidly expanding the brand These differences culminated in an irreparable rift during World War II when both served in the German army and had experiences that further widened the rift between them After the war the feud between the brothers reached breaking point In 1948 Adi founded Adidas while Rudolf founded Puma The split not only divided the family but also the town of Herzogenaurach which became known as the divided town Residents chose sides and the rivalry between the two companies became an inseparable part of local culture This split had a lasting impact on Adidas identity From the beginning the brand was associated with technical innovation and a commitment to sporting performance values that reflected Adi Dassler's vision At the same time rivalry with Puma forced Adidas to differentiate itself constantly looking for new ways to stand out in the competitive market Practical Example Adidas First Sports Sponsorship A practical example of Adi Dassler's vision can be seen in his sponsorship of athlete Jesse Owens at the 1936 Berlin Olympics At the time Owens an African American athlete faced racial prejudice in both the United States and Nazi Germany Despite this Adi saw Owens potential and provided him with custom made footwear to compete in Wearing Dassler shoes Owens won four gold medals becoming a symbol of endurance and athletic excellence This sponsorship not only raised the brand's profile but also reinforced Adidas
