off-centering is required to avoid overcompensation. The degree of off-centering depends upon the size of the off-centering device. A 1-mm off-centering device is usually sufficient, but only if the beam is not being moved more than 10 mm from the isocenter. If the off-centering device is too large, the beam will be moved more than 10 mm from the isocenter, and the beam will be off-center.
