Parental Homework Help:

Homework, Learning and Academic Success: The Role of Family and Contextual Variables Antonio Valle, Susana Rodríguez, Pedro Rosário, Mar Lorenzo Moledo, 2020-02-24

The main purpose of this Research Topic is to analyze and identify the main family and contextual variables that are involved in the process of carrying out homework. This will require studying the role played by teachers, students and families in order to ensure that schoolwork is a useful learning tool. Although the role of the student is obviously crucial in homework research, has focused on the cumulative time spent by the student carrying out homework. However, the time spent on homework is not in itself evidence of the student's involvement, nor is time spent indicative of quality time. Indeed, an excess of time can sometimes denote low competence in a field of knowledge, while spending less time on homework could be indicative of high competence. It is more likely that a high dedication of time spent on homework reflects high motivation or comprehension deficits rather than commitment to learning or academic motivation. In tandem with the role of the student, teachers as responsible for prescribing homework assignments for students also become central players in the process of completing homework assignments. The decisions that teachers make about homework prescriptions and the amount and type of tasks they set will determine to a large extent the quality of the homework process, including the student's motivation and the student's level of engagement with homework. Furthermore, the fact that homework is useful, interesting and motivating for students will depend on how the teacher prescribes those tasks and the connection established with classroom learning. Teacher feedback also acquires particular relevance for this point by helping the students to accurately estimate the quality of their progress and overcome the difficulties they may have encountered in carrying out their homework. Lastly, the effectiveness of teacher feedback depends on its contribution to the student's educational progress and how that student will perform in the future. In addition to the student who performs the task and the teacher who prescribes and corrects it, we must not lose sight of parents' role. Although there are discrepancies regarding the role that parents play in relation to homework, it is evident that their implication has important consequences not only on the final result of those tasks but also on the very process of carrying them out. Everything seems to indicate that the family environment and more specifically the support and feedback provided by parents is a factor that can determine the involvement of students in school duties. In this way, providing emotional support, encouraging children to get involved, can contribute positively to improving their motivation and interest in the performance of homework. The objective of this Research Topic is to provide researchers and professionals in psychology and education settings with some of the most recent empirical evidence regarding the homework process, its prescription and correction. Overall, we aim to cease making homework a source of conflict and controversy at the socio-educational level in order to provide useful instruments for improving the quality of student learning. This work was developed with the financing of the research projects EDU2013-44062-P (MINECO), EDU2017-82984-P (MEIC).

An Examination of Parents' Socioeconomic Background, Stress and Value of Homework as Predictors of Quality of Homework Involvement Elif Wonders,2018 How parents help children with homework has important implications for academic outcomes Research on the impact of parents socioeconomic background SEB on quality of homework involvement QHI is inconclusive The present study replicated methods used by Dumont Trautwein Nagy and Nagengast 2014 to examine immigration status occupational status and education level as predictors of parents QHI Dumont et al 2014 employed Self Determination Theory as the theoretical framework in creating a student report quality of parental homework involvement measure with parental control structure and responsiveness as the scales In the present study the QHI measure was further developed and adapted into a parent report questionnaire to test Dumont et al s 2014 findings in a younger elementary aged sample of 81 students In addition to examining SEB variables as predictors of QHI scales parental stress and parental value of homework were also evaluated as predictors The present study replicated Dumont et al s 2014 findings as multiple regression analyses revealed indices of SEB were not significant predictors of QHI scales In support of the present studies hypotheses linear regression analyses revealed higher levels of stress and viewing homework as valuable predicted greater levels of parental control and parental responsiveness respectively Hence parental stress and value of homework play a more important role in influencing QHI than parents education occupation and immigration status Findings suggest parents provide higher quality homework support when their own psychological needs are addressed Interventions aimed at facilitating students homework experience should support the psychological needs of those providing the homework support

It provides valuable insights which may contribute to shaping better home school relationships for Maori parents and children. The parents in the study wanted their children to have a better education than they had and expressed a strong wish to be involved in their child's schooling. The key factor is school outreach. When teachers reach out into the community showing their respect for the relationships and activities which matter for Maori parents and their children, partnerships with parents appear to be more readily achieved. How well Maori children do at school is strongly linked to how well parents and children relate to school staff.
