Asia and the Pacific Anis Zaman,2018 The Asia and the Pacific region has become a global economic powerhouse The region s rapid and sustained economic growth increasing population expanding industrialisation and rapid urbanization are driving rapid growth in energy demand which Ensuring that supplies of energy are adequate to meet the growth in demand in ways that are socially economically and environmentally responsible creates a new set of challenges for policymakers The transition to 2030 energy pathway which is aimed at addressing those challenges has four coherent and interlinked objectives increased energy supply to meet the growing demand improved energy security meeting the SDG7 targets and achieving NDCs Addressing the complex and challenging task requires policymakers to develop a clear sustainable and achievable pathway that would enable the countries as well as the region as a whole to achieve the 2030 goals and targets This report undertakes an in depth analysis to first determine the level of achievement is possible under the current policy regime by developing a baseline It then identifies the gap between the baseline and the 2030 targets to inform policymakers the additional efforts and resources that would be needed to adequately achieve SDG7 targets as well as the NDCs mitigation targets for the energy sector Finally different transition pathways have been developed and their socio economic and environmental facets have been examined to assist policymakers to make an informed decision The report also identifies the enabling policy technology and market environment that would accelerate the achievement of the 2030 targets House of

The objective of this assignment is to research charging infrastructure requirements that potentially increase the demand for electric vehicles. The scope of this work will be limited to the German market except for the overview of the e Mobility market development. To examine the objective a secondary research of current literature statistical reports media and regulations will be performed. First of all the author will present theoretical foundations to better understand the subsequent chapters following by an overview of the global e Mobility market development. Hereafter the components of charging infrastructure are examined and the current challenges regarding market penetration following an in depth research of the charging infrastructure requirements to increase the demand for electric vehicles. Finally the author will summarize her conclusion and outlook. Climate change new technologies and less dependence on fossil fuels are major drivers for the development of electric mobility. Electric mobility produces much less CO₂ especially when operated using renewable based electricity and therefore seen as key element of the energy transition towards a CO₂ neutral environment. In addition the batteries of electric vehicles EV can be used as energy storage to offset fluctuations in solar and wind power. Thus electric vehicles foster the market integration and expansion of these volatile energy sources. To support and promote research and development of electric vehicles the Federal Government has adopted a set of measures e.g. the extension of charging infrastructure. The German Government set ambitious goals for the German charging infrastructure. In order to reach this goal customers must be convinced that an EV is better than the conventional motor type cars. Slowly but electric vehicles become more visible nowadays. The major current challenges still pose the range of batteries and the charging management. Through digitalization of traffic systems and the increasing automation of mobility in form of autonomous driving cars the change will be further accelerated.
