Current Progress and Challenges in the Development of a Hepatitis C Virus Vaccine Steven K.H. Foun, Thomas F. Baumert, 2019-01-22 More than 70 million people worldwide are infected with hepatitis C virus a major cause of liver cirrhosis liver failure and hepatocellular carcinoma world wide In the last decade this cancer has emerged as the second leading cause of cancer death and the global burden is increasing by two million new infections per year mainly due to injection drug use An effective vaccine will be the most effective means to contain the spread of this virus worldwide The articles in this Research Topic describe the progress that has been made towards a preventive vaccine and the challenges that still need to be overcome to ultimately achieve this goal

Why Vaccines to HIV, HCV and Malaria Have So Far Failed - Challenges to Developing Vaccines against Immunoregulating Pathogens Shuo Li, Magdalena Plebanski, Peter Smooker, Eric J. Gowans, 2016-09-14 Despite continuous progress in the development of anti viral and anti bacterial parasite drugs the high cost of medicines and the potential for re infection especially in high risk groups suggest that protective vaccines to some of the most dangerous persistent infections are still highly desirable There are no vaccines available for HIV HCV and Malaria and all attempts to make a broadly effective vaccine have failed so far In this Research Topic we look into why vaccines have failed over the years and what we have learn from these attempts Rather than only showing positive results this issue aims to reflect on failed efforts in vaccine development Coming to understand our limitations will have theoretical and practical implications for the future development of vaccines to these major global disease burdens

Immunology of Human Infection André J. Nahmias, Richard J. O'Reilly, 1982-01-31 When we were first approached by the senior editors of this series to edit a book on interactions between the host and infectious agents we accepted this offer as an exciting challenge The only condition readily agreed upon was that such a book should focus on the immunology of infections in humans Our reasons if not biases were several fold We sensed that the fields of microbiology and immunology which had diverged as each was focusing on its individual search were coming together In agreement with the opinions expressed by Dr Richard Krause in the Introduction we strongly believed that the development of the immune system evolved in response to infectious agents and that the evolution of these agents was influenced in turn by the character of the host's responses An intensive examination of the multitude of primitive or more recently developed host defense mechanisms to determine their relative contribution to man's resistance to a given infectious agent appeared to us to be of crucial basic and practical interest Many immune mechanisms studied in animals were being explored in humans and it appeared timely to focus particularly on what was known about man's resistance to infectious agents correlating this information with lessons
