MicroFranchising Jason S. Fairbourne, Stephen W. Gibson, W. Gibb Dyer, 2007 Microfranchising offers a thorough going and impartial analysis of microfranchising covering both practice and theory. The book's well documented chapters provide an objective overview of the various aspects of microfranchising and outline its main characteristics. This book should be read by all those involved in or concerned by the fight against poverty who are looking for a complete overview of microfranchising. The various actors of the entrepreneurial world will also find much in the volume of interest to them. Academics will find well documented sources complete with operational examples which will help them to present action projects to their students. Microfranchising and more generally micro entrepreneurship represent a vast field of research that will be of great interest to scholars working in the field of entrepreneurship. Fairbourne, Gibson and Dyer's book not only offers a valuable introduction to micro entrepreneurship but demonstrates the human side of entrepreneurship as a whole. Frédéric Demerens Entrepreneurship and Innovation Microfranchising has clues and cautions to help create wealth and lift humanity from poverty by energizing communities, families and individuals to profit making productivity in cooperation with guidance, education and other resources from established businesses, financial institutions and philanthropists. Anyone interested in shrinking the bottom of the world's income and wealth pyramid to create real widespread sustainability and all the consequent social and health benefits should read this book. Joseph H. Astrachan, Kennesaw State University, US. What do buying honey, renting mobile phones and fitting prescription glasses have in common? Answer: they are all activities that have expanded in low income countries through microfranchising. This book brings together the ideas of researchers and social entrepreneurs at the heart of a movement to turn microfranchising into a mechanism for sustainable poverty reduction on a scale to match microfinance. A seductive mix of advocacy and realism analysis and case study provides readers with the ingredients to make up their own mind about the potential of microfranchising as a development tool. James G. Copestake, University of Bath, UK. Poverty remains one of the most intractable problems in the developing world. Microfranchising offers great promise in alleviating poverty by aiding in the foundation of locally owned businesses. Microfranchising is defined as small businesses whose start up costs are minimal and whose concepts and operations are easily replicated. It involves the systematizing of microenterprises to create and replicate turnkey businesses for the poor. With the awarding of the 2006 Nobel Peace Prize attention has increased on this remarkable concept. This unique book provides an overview of the need to alleviate poverty and what methods have been used in the past to do so, e.g. microcredit. It then introduces the concept of the microfranchise and discusses how this business model can be used in poverty alleviation. Different models of microfranchising are reviewed and specific case studies highlighted to show how it has worked in different parts of the world. The book concludes with a discussion of the advantages as well as the potential problems and pitfalls that accompany microfranchising. This book is a must read for business scholars and economists, practitioners and lenders, members of NGOs.

Arthur James Wells,2007    The Economist ,2007    Micro Franchising for the Last Mile Delivery to the Base of the Pyramid in India - The Case of TARALife ,2015 It is argued that the micro franchise business model is probably the most effective way to combat poverty This thesis aims to test the potential of the micro franchise business model as a last mile distribution strategy for TARA an Indian social enterprise TARA develops solutions for the underprivileged that face environmental and development challenges The organization struggles to establish effective last mile distribution channels to make these solutions available to the people who need it most and have therefore caught interest into the new and promising development tool Since literature does not provide sound theoretical knowledge on how to develop a micro franchise the first part of the thesis is concerned with the design of a micro franchise development framework As a first step TARA micro franchise objectives are defined and prioritised Then information is collected in terms of lessons learnt from organizations with similar objectives as well as the business environment in which the future micro franchise will operate in Based on these findings business decisions are made in terms of the overall strategy the design of the TARA franchisee as well as the franchisee customer relationship The TARA franchisee relationship is defined in terms of seven key characteristics while the franchisee customer relationship is determined by the Canvas Business Model The micro franchise model has shown to be a suitable model to ensure the last mile distribution in terms of coverage and sustainability However TARA is not quite ready to implement a sustainable micro franchise model At this stage it is not possible to define the business in a box model since the products currently sold by TARA do not exhibit large enough margins to ensure an adequate and secure income source for the franchisee
